GANG SUSPECT IN KIDNAP CASE SOUGHT HERE

LINDBERGH DOUBTS CLEW AT NORFOLK

Virginia Pastor Still Says Abducted Baby Will Be Returned Soon.

Harry Fleischer, reputed leader of the Detroit Purple gang, one of his henchman and a woman and baby were sought in Washington last night as the trail in the Lindbergh kidnaping case apparently turned for the first time to the Nation's Capital. Fleischer has been hunted by authorities for questioning in the case for several days.

Washington police sent out a general lookout through the radio and teletype system for the Detroit gangster about 11:45 o'clock last night after a man who bore a marked resemblance to Fleischer had applied for rooms in the Ninth Precinct.

He was seen by several persons and a detailed description of him was sent out by police. "These men are dangerous," the message declared, and policemen on beats were ordered to keep them under observation if found and to notify police headquarters at once.

Recognized by Pictures.

"They are stopping somewhere in Washington tonight, probably at a tourist camp or a rooming house," the lookout stated.

The man believed to be Fleischer was reported to police by four youths, who were at a rooming house at 1363 Maryland avenue northeast. They told police they recognized him from a picture carried in the newspapers, and when they were shown a better picture taken from the files at headquarters, they were positive in their identification, police declared.

The boys told headquarters detectives that Fleischer and his aid came to the door of the rooming house and left the woman and baby in the car. They were refused a room because the place was filled, police were told.

Described as "Tough Looking."

The suspicions of the quartet were aroused because the man believed to be Fleischer had a bandage across his head and was so tough looking," they said. After the applicant for a room left the boys followed him to the street, they said, saw him enter the car and turn off Maryland avenue into Twelfth street northeast.

The boys who furnished the information to police are Howard Wolfrey, son of the rooming house keeper; Bernard Ockerhauser, 327 Thirteenth street northeast; Alexander Mackie, 1204 C street northeast, and Everett Lucas, 231 Twelfth street northeast.

Their description of "Fleischer" and the other man were detailed, but they did not get a good look at the woman and the baby.

They were traveling in a Chevrolet sedan, 1929 or 1930 model, blue or gray in color, bearing license plates which had a black background and white letters, the boys said.

Description of Suspect.

The lookout sent by police after the boys had told their story ordered patrolmen here to watch for "Harry Fleischer, 35 years old, 5 feet 8 inches tall, weighing about 200 pounds, with a white bandage on his head, partly covered by a hat. He is wearing a light overcoat, medium gray suit; has a ruddy face and is tough looking. He looks like a foreigner.

"Traveling in company with another white man, between 30 or 35 years old, five feet, six inches, 140

Reading President Expires Suddenly

Philadelphia, March 25 (A.P.).—Agnew T. Dice, president of the Reading Co., fell dead in a street car tonight while going home with his wife. Death apparently was due to heart failure.

He was taken to the Hannemann Hospital, where he was pronounced dead. He was 70 years old and had been president of the Reading Co. for eighteen years. In addition to his railroad activities, he was a director in a number of banks and other companies.

Besides his widow, he is survived by a son and two daughters. Mrs. Dice accompanied her husband to the hospital, where she collapsed when told he was dead. She was placed under the care of the Dice family physician.

New Extortion Note Believed Sent Lewis

Police Refuse to Confirm or Deny Third Threat; Burke Announces Three Late Clews; Longworth Letter Writer Thought Identified.

Strong indications were seen last night that Sir Willmott Lewis, Washington correspondent of the London Times, had received another communication from the person who is trying to extort $1,500 from him under threat of harming his son, Willmott, jr.

While there is no confirmation of the report, Inspector Frank S. W. Burke, who has been candid heretofore in discussing the Lewis case and the demand of $1,500 from Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth, last night said: "Since 2 o'clock this afternoon any discussion of the Lewis case is out of the question."

"Could you tell us what happened at 2 o'clock that caused the decision not to discuss the case?" he was asked.

"I can not," he answered.

Inspector Burke left his office shortly after 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon and went directly to the home of Sir Willmott, at 1605 New Hampshire avenue, where the 7-year-old Lewis boy has been under constant guard since Monday. The chief of detectives was in conference with Sir Willmott for nearly an hour.

In the second note which was sent to the Lewis home, demanding $1,500, the writer said, in part: "You will pay us $1,500 in small bills after you receive a next and last note, telling how it must be placed are where it must be placed." All questions relating to the receipt of the promised third note, containing such directions, were evaded by Inspector Burke.

That some progress has been made in tracing the author of the notes to the Lewis home was indicated by the announcement of Inspector Burke that three new leads have developed. These clews, the nature of which he would not reveal, will be investigated today.

The investigation of the series of notes to prominent people making demands for money and in some instances threatening bodily harm, simmered down to the following conclusions.

1. Inspector Burke is "reasonably certain that the identity of the man who wrote two letters to Mrs. Longworth demanding $1,500, is estab-

TRUCE PARLEY RIFT HALTED AT SHANGHAI

Shanghai, March 25 (U.P.).—Collapse of the negotiations for a truce in the Shanghai warfare was averted tonight only by the fervent urgings of the American and British ministers.

The truce conference was threatened with disruption when the Japanese delegates declined to set a date for withdrawal of their forces.

They merely estimated that it would require six weeks to complete withdrawal of troops from the region now occupied, extending from the international settlement to a line touching the Szetselin Fort, Yangshang, Tazang and Chenju.

The Chinese objected, declaring that such an attitude on the part of the Japanese was tantamount to occupation of the area. Quo Tai-Chi, of the Chinese foreign office, announced he would discontinue the conference unless the Japanese abide by a draft agreement.

The Chinese delegates arose and prepared to leave, but Nelson T. Johnson, American Minister, and Sir Miles Lampson, the British minister, urged them not to break up the conference.

Manoru Shigemitsu, Japanese minister, also protested against collapse of the negotiations, and it was finally agreed to resume discussions at 10 a. m., tomorrow.

Nanking, China, March 25 (U.P.).—The 18th army, engaged in a campaign against huge Communist forces in the south interior, reported to the war ministry today that it had captured Communist officers in Hiangsi, and disclosed plans for wholesale massacres in Kanchow.

Nanking, China, March 25 (A.P.).—Col. Wang Ken, Chinese army officer, who was graduated from the United States Military Academy in 1918, arrived at Hunshan tonight under military surveillance, setting at rest rumors that he had been executed on a charge of treason.

$2,434,000 DEFICIT FACED BY DISTRICT

Surplus Is Drawn Upon to Balance Budget, Auditor Discloses.

By ROBERT C. ALBRIGHT.

The District of Columbia is facing a 1932 deficit of $2,434,000 in current revenues as compared with appropriation charges, it was disclosed yesterday in published hearings of the House District appropriations subcommittee, released by Chairman Clarence Cannon.

This situation was revealed by Maj. Daniel Donovan, District auditor, in testimony before the House finance group.

"That is the first deficit we have had in current revenues of the District of Columbia since the period between 1902 and 1910," Maj. Donovan told the committee.

To The Post Maj. Donovan last night explained that the "deficit" was not such in the sense that the District is actually "in the red."

It has been possible to balance the budget for 1931 and 1932, however, only by drawing on the District's $6,500,000 surplus, and the $1,200,000 operating capital, he said.

By June 30 the District's surplus will be entirely exhausted, he declared, and in 1933 the Commissioners are faced with the necessity of operating entirely on a current revenue basis.

Moreover, the District will have impaired its operating capital of $3,000,000 by about $1,200,000, he said.

In 1922 the District had a surplus

Border Town Asks Troops To Combat Mexican Raids

U. S. Army Aid is Requested by Mayor Following Series of Robberies Attributed to Marauding Bands From Across International Boundary

Santa Fe, N. M., March 25 (A.P.).—Alarmed by a series of robberies which they attributed to marauding bands of Mexicans, residents of Columbus, N. M., today appealed through Mayor Louis Ravel to Gov. Arthur Seligman for protection.

Mayor Ravel asked the governor to request the Federal Government to send a United States Army patrol from Fort Bliss.

Sheriff Jess Thorne, of Deming, N. M. and Brig. Gen. Walter G. Short, Fort Bliss commander, however, were not inclined to believe that an emergency existed.

Sheriff Thorne said he did not believe the robberies were being conducted by an organized band of men. He said he knew the identity of two of the men said to have participated in the store robbery and had tracked them to the border.

Mayor Ravel said the raids began Wednesday night with the attempted robbery of a store at Columbus. Several men were driven off. Shots were exchanged and the bandits headed toward the border.

Thursday night another band appeared at the L. M. Stiles ranch, a mile north of the international boundary line, but were driven away by A. Poole, ranch caretaker, who exchanged shots with them. No one was injured.

At Fort Bliss, Gen. Short said a force of 2,800 officers and men could be put into the field in three hours to curb bandit activities at Columbus, but said the situation "doesn't seem to be an emergency."

Gov. Seligman took the matter up with Brig. Gen. Osborne C. Wood, adjutant general of the New Mexico National Guard.

Columbus was raided in 1916 by the Mexican bandit Villa. Later Gen. John J. Pershing led a punitive expedition into Mexico. The town lies immediately across the border from Las Palomas, Chihuahua State.

U. S. LOAN BODY AND I. C. C. RIFT ON CREDIT SEEN

Commission Changes Its Rail Finance Attitude Under Pressure.

CRITICIZES BANKERS IN REVERSING STAND

(Associated Press.)

The insistence of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation yesterday resulted in the Interstate Commerce Commission reluctantly reversing its attitude toward bankers refusing to extend railroad loans.

Placing responsibility squarely on the shoulders of the finance corporation, the commission authorized the Missouri Pacific Railroad to borrow $5,850,000 of Government funds to pay half of $11,700,000 in bank loans due April 1.

It indicated belief that the bankers, J. P. Morgan & Co., Kuhn Loeb & Co. and the Guaranty Trust Co. of New York, should have carried the entire loan instead of extending only half of it to October 1.

Hoover Reveals Loans Total.

Meanwhile President Hoover announced yesterday that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation had loaned a total of $234,981,714.

The entire Missouri Pacific authorization yesterday was for $12,800,000 but $6,950,000 is to pay bond interest and bills for equipment and supplies. The railroad previously had been granted two loans totaling $4,300,000, making their authorized borrowings of Government funds $17,100,000.

The commission's opinion brought to the surface an undercurrent of differences between the two governmental bodies which has been running several weeks. Some hint of the variance of views was seen a week ago yesterday when President Hoover called officials of the finance corporation into a series of conferences with Balthasar H. Meyer, chairman of the finance division of the commission, and fifteen leading railroad executives.

"We are taking the action here with some reluctance," said the commission. "We are not convinced that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation should be expected to take up bank loans of this character. We yield our own views to those of that body, which as we construe the law is charged by Congress with responsibility for determining that question."

Dawes-Meyer Clash Denied.

Within the Reconstruction Finance Corporation a reported difference of opinion between Charles G. Dawes, president of the corporation, and Eugene Meyer, chairman of its board of directors, was denied.

The only comment at the corpora-

Madman Is Killed In 12-Hour Siege

Lake Elmo, Minn., March 25 (U.P.).—Bullets whined for twelve hours today out of the basement windows of Ernest Kern's dingy battery shop on Lake Elmo's main street.

Kern had become insane overnight. He barricaded himself in the cellar, with two guns and a plentiful supply of ammunition, and took pot shots at passersby. They fled and called police. Time and time again the latter tried to storm his stronghold, but Kern drove them back. Finally the officers obtained tear gas bombs, nd sent them crashing through Kern's window. Momentarily the firing stopped.

The police shot a fusillade of 25 bullets into the basement, trying to spray lead into all corners. Then they approached cautiously, crept through a rear window and found Kern's body crumpled on the stairs. On one side of it was a .32-caliber revolver; on the other a .22 rifle, still hot.

Metcalf Plans to Work For Wet G. O. P. Plank

Pawtucket, R. I., March 25 (A.P.).—United States Senator Jesse H. Metcalf, Republican, advised the Pawtucket Times today he expected to work for a prohibition repeal plank in the platform to be adopted by the Republican national convention at Chicago.

Rhode Island's delegation to the national convention will be elected at a State convention. Until shortly before Metcalf's last election to the Senate in 1930 he was considered a supporter of prohibition. Two weeks before the election he announced his opposition to the measure.

HOUSE LEADERS TO BE HAUNTED BY BONUS BILL

HELD SURE TO VOTE 2-BILLION PROPOSAL

By EDWARD T. FOLLIARD.

The troubles of Speaker John N. Garner and other Democratic leaders in the House will not end with the tax bill. After that measure will come the so-called soldiers bonus bill.

Having wrestled with the problem of putting money into the Treasury, the House will consider a gigantic scheme for taking money out of the Treasury.

The tax bill is expected to raise about a billion dollars. The bonus bill would eat up that billion, and another billion besides.

To some it may seem fantastic that a legislative body, now wrestling with a prospective $2,000,000,000 deficit, should consider a bonus bill that would cost another $2,000,000,000.

Probably Will Pass.

Fantastic or not, the House not only is going to consider the bill but in all probability is going to pass it. Already, it was reported at the Capitol yesterday, 160 members have given their pledge to a veterans' organization to vote for the bill.

Representative Wright Patman (Democrat), Texas, the most conspicuous of the bonus advocates, said last night there was no doubt in his mind but that the bill would pass.

Friends of the measure at the other end of the Capitol predict that the Senate will act favorably, too, although they expect that a strong effort will be made to stifle the measure in the finance committee.

Veto Held Certain.

If the bill is passed, President Hoover will, of course, veto it. To pass it over his veto would require a two-thirds vote. Few persons at the Capitol think that this number could be mustered for the bill. Indeed, there are many who will vote for it simply because they are confident that it can never become a law.

Actually, the only effect of the bonus fight will be to show the utter impotency of Speaker Garner and all other leaders in the face of a stampede by frightened politicians, thinking of the next election.

The hysteria over the bonus bill will not be confined to the Democratic side of the aisle. The Republicans must come up for reelection next November, too.

Representative Patman thinks that passage of the bonus bill would help the Democratic party in the next campaign. Needless to say, there are

Sirovich Suffers Collapse at Work

New Yorker Is Confined to Bed; Condition Is Not Held Serious.

Representative William I. Sirovich, of New York, was under the care of a physician and a nurse at his apartment at the Mayflower Hotel last night after he had collapsed in his offices at the Senate Office Building yesterday afternoon. Representative Sirovich fainted three times during the afternoon and was hurried to his home by his secretary.

His condition is not believed to be serious, but he will be confined to his bed for several days. His illness was diagnosed as a kidney stone. It was said at his apartment last night. He will not be taken to a hospital unless the condition becomes aggravated, it was said.

Representative Sirovich has been extremely busy lately with committee hearings in connection with his sensational attacks on dramatic critics, whom he charged with destroying the legitimate theater. He has also been working overtime as chairman of the house patents committee, drafting a new copyright bill. He remained on the floor of the House yesterday during most of the debate on the tax bill, awaiting an opportunity to talk on the Cullen amendment to tax 2.75 beer. Representative Sirovich himself is a doctor.

100 Koreans Are Killed As Guerillas Burn Town

Tokio, Saturday, March 26 (U.P.).—Press dispatches from Harbin, Manchuria, today reported that 100 Koreans were killed by Guerillas, who burned the village of Liapuchen, a terminus of the Muleng Light Railway, the eastern branch of the Chinese Eastern Railway.

HOUSE KILLS BEER TAX; PRESIDENT INSISTENT ON BALANCED BUDGET

Executive Voices Faith That Bipartisan Pledge Will Be Kept.

MILLS TELLS PERILS IN TREASURY CRISIS

Hoover Compares Excessive Federal Borrowing to That of Families.

By LAWRENCE SULLIVAN.

Calm and undismayed in the face of the most alarming breakdown of congressional leadership in more than a quarter of a century, President Hoover undertook yesterday to reassure a bewildered and slightly hysterical Nation that the emphatic nonpartisan pledge to balance the Federal budget will be, in the end, carried out in good faith by both Democrats and Republicans.

"I am confident that the undertaking of the representatives of both parties to balance the budget remains and will be fulfilled," the President said in a formal public statement at his regular Friday afternoon press conference. "It is the keystone of recovery. It must be done."

Coupled with a plea that all patriotically minded citizens, and all their organizations, "should support and not obstruct the members of Congress in sound efforts to both reduce expenditures and adjust taxation," Mr. Hoover uttered a solemn warning that without a balanced budget all the heroic efforts and grinding sacrifices thus far made for the restoration of public confidence and economic reconstruction will be rendered ineffective, "and the depression prolonged indefinitely."

Mills Tells of Perils in Delay.

"It must not be forgotten," he said in conclusion, "that the needs of the Government are inseparable from the welfare of the people."

While the President spoke, Secretary of the Treasury Mills was responding to the invitation of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States to outline before its board of directors, the present position of the Nation's finances. In utter frankness, he told the business directorate that every day of shilly-shallying on the measures to balance the budget tends to impair the national credit and further to undermine commodity prices, security values and wages.

Silas Strawn, president of the Chamber of Commerce, who returned last week from the annual meeting of the International Chamber, at Paris, told the meeting that throughout Europe, "investors in American securities displayed great concern as to the prospects for a balanced American governmental budget."

World Distress Aggravated.

"Economic distress and unemployment throughout Europe and many parts of the world," his report to the board continued, "was immeasurably

First Orange Blossoms Rushed to Mrs. Hoover

Lindsay, Calif., March 25 (A.P.).—A package containing the first orange blossoms of the season here were sent by airmail today to Mrs. Herbert Hoover, wife of the President, as an Easter gift.

Text of President's Statement on Budget

I have received many hundred inquiries from different parts of the country as to the prospects of balancing the budget and for other information connected therewith.

I am confident that the undertaking of the representatives of both political parties to balance the budget remains and will be fulfilled. It is the very keystone of recovery. It must be done. Without it the several measures for restoration of public confidence and reconstruction which we have already undertaken will be incomplete and the depression prolonged indefinitely.

For a clear view of the situation our people should understand that the deficit for the next fiscal year, excluding further reduction of the national debt during that year, is es-

PAY CUT BILL LIKELY TO BAN PROMOTIONS

House Economy Committee to Meet Monday; 48 Labor Leaders in Canvass.

Prohibitions on filling of vacancies, promotions, or pay increases within grades probably will be written into any Federal pay-cut bill reported out by the House special economy committee, it was learned last night.

The committee adjourned late yesterday without having reached agreement on any one of the sixteen bills under consideration. At least, leaders refused to admit that any decision had been reached, declining to throw light on the nature of the debate.

"I think the minority is gaining strength," said Representative John J. Cochran (Democrat), Missouri, the only member of the committee flatly opposed to any pay cut. He would not expend on his statement and Appropriations Chairman Joseph W. Byrns said he did not know what he meant by it.

Herbert D. Brown, director of the Bureau of Efficiency, was questioned as to savings under restrictions on vacancy filling, pay increases and promotions.

This ground had previously been gone over largely in every appropriations bill reported to the House this session. The pay increase ban was adopted in the Agriculture, Interior and State, Justice, Commerce and Labor supply bills, but stricken from the Postoffice and Treasury appropriations bill.

This last action, and the refusal of the Senate to incorporate any restriction on pay increases and vacancy filling in its appropriation bills, is believed to have precipitated the latest House drive for pay cuts. Since the pay increase barrier has been stricken from the Postoffice and Treasury measure, but remains in the other supply bills, it is now the problem of the appropriations committee to work out uniform provisions on this issue for each of the supply bills.

OIL TARIFF RETAINED BY VOTE OF 190 TO 97

Sales Tax Opponents Pay Debt to Western Members by Support.

By J. B. McDONNELL.

The House yesterday voted down the proposal to recognize, by way of a special tax, beer of pre-Volstead voltage and voted to retain in the Democratic tax bill the tariff on oil imports.

Defeat of the beer amendment to the tax bill, which was offered by Representative Thomas H. Cullen (Democrat), of New York, had been conceded before the vote was taken. The vote was 216 to 132, which indicated the maximum strength the wets might expect on a straight vote at this time.

The oil tariff was kept in the Democratic tax bill by a vote of 190 to 97. Representatives of the oil producing Western States had hawked their votes along both sides of the street and thereby won their protective tariff from a House having a Democratic majority.

The oil tariff of 1 cent a gallon, it was commonly reported, was put into the bill by the House leaders sponsoring the manufacturers' sales tax in the expectation that it would win the oil votes for the sales tax.

Reciprocal Vote Delivered.

Opponents of the sales tax countered with the proposal to the oilers that if they would join in the rebellion against the sales tax they in turn, would vote to keep the oil tariff in. The oil votes were delivered against the sales tax Friday. The sales tax opponents reciprocated yesterday.

Representative John W. McCormack (Democrat), of Massachusetts who had been elected as the leader of the New England and Atlantic seaboard opponents of the oil tariff led the fight to strike it out. It was on his amendment that the vote was taken and the decision to leave the tariff in the tax bill.

Consideration of the tax bill will be resumed when the House convenes at noon today, and it is expected that the details of wiping out the remainder of the sales tax section will be completed. There was a parliamentary tangle about the matter yesterday due to the phraseology of the second amendment offered Friday by Representative Robert L. Doughton (Democrat), of North Carolina, leader of the anti-sales tax forces. Representative Charles R. Crisp (Democrat), of Georgia, acting chairman of the ways and means commitee, proposed to straighten the tangle out by offering an amendment yesterday.

Crisp Amendment Up.

The Crisp amendment was pending when the House adjourned. The vote in the session yesterday were taken on amendment to the Crisp amendments. The Crisp amendment is expected to be accepted without any fuss today and the House will go back to consideration of the tax bill where it left off when it decided to have the sales tax fight out. It will go back to the administrative changes part of the bill and is expected to speed through those pages.

Leaders estimate the measure will be passed by the end of next week and sent to the Senate. What the Senate will do with it and in what time remains to be seen.

There are those among the senators who predict the bill will not be

Middlesboro, Ky., March 25 (A.P.).—A group of Eastern college students, who wanted to investigate the labor controversy in the Kentucky coal fields, were hustled out of town tonight after an investigation by County Attorney Walter B. Smith.

After an examination of a number of members of the group of 40 to 50, the county attorney told them he had information they were sent into southeastern Kentucky by Communists. He then told them they would have to make $1,000 peace bond each or leave the State, and added, "We know you can't post this bond."

With a number of them protesting that their rights were being violated, they were put back into the bus and two automobiles in which they had arrived from New York via Knoxville, and headed toward Cumberland Gap and the Tennessee border.

N. R. Patterson, a lawyer, addressed the crowd of spectators that jammed the courthouse here during Smith's examination of the students and urged that there be no violence. He said another New York group had received some scars during a visit to the coal fields, and told the crowd: "Probably there are some of these students who would like nothing better than to have some scars to show for this visit."

Two men who gave their names as Clifford Sing and John Jennings, who accompanied the students here, were separated from them. Some students said they were National Miners Union representatives who had been taken on as guides.

After telling the students he had information that Communists had sent them into Kentucky, the county attorney said: "The people of Bell County won't tolerate having any of their rights violated by people representing Communists."

He then added he did not want to

SALES TAX DEFEAT RENEWS PROBLMES

Difficulties Raised as Result of Crisp Report Failure Are Analyzed.

By SAMUEL RUSSELL.

Now that the wisdom of the ways and means committee distilled into a general sales tax has been rejected by the House of Representatives, notwithstanding the solemn assertion that there were no other ways or means to supply the revenue end of a balanced budget, it is in order to examine the problem in its broad bearings.

It is a phenomenon of politics that twenty years in Congress should have made some men so myopic that while they could see that $595,000,000 of revenue could be levied by a rate of 2½ per cent on $26,000,000,000 of gross income of a limited number of manufacturing corporations, they could not see that $600,000,000 could be levied by a rate of ½ per cent on the gross revenue of all corporations reported in the slump year 1930 at $120,000,000,000.

The total business taxes contemplated by the revenue bill as set out in the Crisp report included the following:

Estimated 1933 corporate income tax	$382,000,000
Corporate income tax increase	21,000,000
Admissions duty	90,000,000
Excise on lubricating oil	25,000,000
Excise on malt sirup	50,000,000
Duty on telegraph messages	35,000,000
Excise on gasoline	5,000,000
General sales tax	595,000,000
	$1,203,000,000

Revenue Estimates.

These revenues of $1,200,000,000 from business can be levied by a rate of 24 per cent on $5,000,000,000 of corporate net income; by a rate of 12 per cent on $10,000,000,000 of taxable corporate income produced by a repeal of the deduction of interest; by a rate of 10 per cent on $12,000,000,000 of taxable corporate income produced by a repeal of the deduction of interest and a repeal of the deduction of high salaries and compensation to officers and directors; or by a rate of 1 per cent or $120,000,000,000 of gross corporate income which would have the effect of transferring the corporate tax from the profits of business to the dollar volume of business, and which would otherwise permit the corporate tax to be paid monthly, as was provided for the general sales tax.

All incomes have their source in the dollar production of business. It is, therefore, more rational to increase the revenues by adjustments in the personal and corporate income takes than by the imposition of general or special excises on consumption. This may be done under these specifications.

1. A tax of 1 per cent on gross corporate revenue to raise $1,200,000,000 of revenue in monthly payments to average $100,000,000, for which tax full credit is to be given against the present 12 per cent tax on net corporative income augmented by the repeal of the deduction of interest. This arrangement will catch those corporations whose tax at 12 per cent on net exceeds the tax of 1 per cent on gross. It will catch the corporations which pass the 1 per cent tax on to the public or which otherwise have inordinate profit when referred to gross income.

Would Act as Sales Tax.

This duty will operate as a sales tax of 1 per cent on the conversion of capital assets and will permit the repeal of the capital gains tax.

Upon investment income the 1 per cent tax will amount to a tax of but ½ mill upon the $100 principal of a 5 per cent bond or other investment.

2. The Crisp report estimates personal income tax revenues for 1933 at $275,000,000 and the bill makes provision for an additional $112,000,000 from incomes under higher rates, to produce a total of $387,000,000.

In lieu of this, it is proposed that there be a tax on 20,000,000 personal incomes to produce $1 on a $1,000 income and to progress to a tax of 40 per cent on an income of $400,000, with the maximum tax of 40 per cent upon the entirety of incomes above $400,000, and with the repeal of all exemptions, deductions and credits, the tax to be computed on the gross income and the normal tax and the surtax to be merged in a single, progressive personal income tax.

Formula for Levy.

"Upon incomes of $400,000 or more a tax of 40 per cent, to be computed upon the entirety of the income; and

"Upon incomes of less than $400,000 a tax to be computed at a rate which shall contain 1 thousandth of a mill for each dollar of the income upon which the tax is to be computed."

To compute the tax under this rule take the square of the income dollars, discard the last 4 figures in the product, and point off cents to get the dollars and cents in the tax.

It is a moral certainty that the new personal income tax will produce a great deal more of revenue than the increased bracket rates of the bill, and that it will do so at much lower and more equitable and consistent rates than those contained in the bill.

3. An excise of ½ cent on 120,000,000,000 cigarettes to produce $600,000,000 of revenue with no new general or special excises on commodities or duties on transactions of any kind. This arrangement will raise the price of cigarettes from 15 cents to 20 cents per pack.

4. Imposts to raise $400,000,000 as estimated for 1933 in the Crisp report.

Some Receipts Not Included.

These proposals take no account of miscellaneous Treasury receipts, of miscellaneous internal revenue receipts not included in the income and cigarette taxes. They take no account of projected reduction in expenditures. They do not exploit the possibility of more customs revenues by laying moderate imposts on articles now on the free list.

The income tax upon the new base may be readily raised by 10 per cent or by a number of times 10 per cent if that is necessary to bring the required revenue.

The fiscal operations of the Treasury are continuous operations. The revenues therefore ought to be gotten into a continuous course. This will be done in a major manner by the proposed 1 cent duty on the dollar volume of corporate business.

The principal impediment to these proposals is that they are too direct and effective in application, too responsive in revenues, and too even in incidence to satisfy the coterie of experts who for years have been balling up the income taxes, and whose stock in trade is the knowledge they have of the present revenue act, forward, backward and crossway. For Congress to repeal this professional knowledge would be just too bad.

President Again Urges Balancing of Budget

timated at about $1,250,000,000. This follows a deficit of $500,000,000 last year as a deficit of over $2,000,000,000 this year, likewise calculated without reduction of the debt. These deficiencies are almost wholly due to decrease in tax receipts.

We must eliminate this deficit for next year by the further reduction of governmental expenditures and by increases in taxation. The expenditures budgeted for the next fiscal year as sent to the Congress amounted to about $4,100,000,000 after a reduction by the administration of $365,000,000 under the total for the current year. In considering possible further economies in expenditures we must not forget that of this total about $2,100,000,000 is of such character that it can not be reduced; it is largely an inheritance of the great war through increase of payment on Government obligations and the care of veterans and their families.

In addition, our Army and Navy costs about $700,000,000. We should not further reduce the strength of our defense. Thus we must make our further economies mainly out of this balance of $1,300,000,000 remaining from the total of $4,100,000,000, together with economies in the Postoffice, as to which only the net operations are included in these figures. Out of this sum of $1,300,000,000 the many other vital services of the Government must be carried on. Every reduction that can be made without serious injury to these services and injustice to our people should be effected. Further economies can be made, and I am confident will be made, through authority of the Congress to eliminate unnecessary functions of the Government or in postponement of less essential activities, together with businesslike reorganization and coordination of Government activities. The appropriation and economy committees of the Congress are now earnestly engaged on all these problems. But when all this is done the balancing of the budget must in the main be accomplished by an increase in taxation, which will restore Government revenues.

Economies in expenditure or increase in taxes alike call for sacrifices—sacrifices which are a part of the country's war on depression. The Government no more than individual families can continue to expend more than it receives without inviting serious consequences. To continue to live on borrowed money only postpones the difficulty and in the meantime begets all manner of new evils and dangers, which create costs and losses to every workman, every farmer and every business man far in excess of the cost of courageous action in balancing the budget.

The American people are no less courageous and no less wise than the people of other nations. All other great nations of the world have been faced with even greater necessities during the past year. In order to preserve their national credit these countries have increased their taxes far more severely than our deficit demands of the American people.

One of the first requirements to the accomplishment of the absolute necessity of a balanced budget is that the people and all their organizations should support and not obstruct the members of Congress in sound efforts to both reduce expenditures and adjust taxation.

It must not be forgotten that the needs of the Government are inseparable from the welfare of the people. Those most vitally concerned in recovery are the ones whose margins of savings are the smallest. They are affected by the depression more seriously than any others; ultimately they will pay the biggest price for any failure on our part of the Government to take the necesary action at this time. We can overcome this national difficulty as we have overcome all our difficulties in the past by willingness to sacrifice and by the resolute unity of national action.

HOUSE DEFEATS TAX ON BEER BUT RETAINS TARIFF ON OIL

passed before the Republican and Democratic conventions in Chicago in June and that Congress will have to come back after the nomination meetings to pass it.

Representative Crisp yesterday named a subcommittee to draft a program of taxes which would take the place of the defeated sales tax, which it was estimated would raise something like $595,000,000. It was significant that he refused to name himself or Representative Henry T. Rainey (Democrat), of Illinois, on the subcommittee. Mr. Rainey is Democratic floor leader and ranks next to Mr. Crisp on the majority side of the committee. Both fought for the sales tax.

Responsibility for the Republican personnel of the subcommittee was put up to the Republican members of the committee and they named Representative Willis Hawley, of Oregon, erstwhile chairman and ranking minority member, and Representative Allen T. Treadway, of Massachusetts. The Democrats on the subcommittee are Representative Heartsill Ragon, of Arkansas, chairman; Fred M. Vinson, of Kentucky, and Harry C. Canfield, of Indiana.

Mr. Crisp's assumption that inasmuch as the sales tax had been defeated there could be no prolonged argument about substitution of the Treasury program was not supported when it came to talk over the question yesterday. The earliest the subcommittee promised to report was Monday.

The subcommittee, Mr. Crisp said, was not committed to acceptance of the Treasury program which had been rejected by the full committee as more objectionable than the general manufacturers' sales tax.

Taxes to Be Considered.

The committee would consider taxes on gasoline, gas, automobiles, jewelry, electric and other artificially cooled refrigerators, cosmetics, electricity, radios, phonographs, stamp tax on bank checks and an increase in the tobacco tax and an increase of from two or three cents in the postage rates.

The committee could bring into its program whatever else it desired, Mr. Crisp said, but he refused to predict the fate of any particular tax.

Both Democratic and Republican leaders of the House are committed to a policy of balancing the budget in the next fiscal year. But there were several members of the House, on both sides of the aisle, who protested against the apparent effort of President Hoover to put responsibility for the unbalanced budget on the shoulders of the House. Although the President's statement evoked no statement on the floor it was predicted that several members would take occasion to lay responsibility for the deficit at the President's door and contend that the House was merely trying to do what was necessary to overcome his dereliction.

Certainly the President's statement did not smooth the temper of the House. It may have been a momentarily good political expedient but it lodged ill-will in the hearts of members of the House who are irked and peeved about the criticism which has been leveled at Congress and especially the House.

The House promised to get good-humored again in the course of the debate over the Cullen beer amendment which would have assessed a tax of 3 cents a pint on authentic beer. Both sides knew that the amendment was going to be beaten.

Representative Thomas L. Blanton (Democrat), of Texas, who is well known to residents of the National Capital, just about succeeded in his efforts to be the most outstanding dry in the House. His opposition to the Cullen amendment was in line with his concurrence in the Anti-saloon League legislative program.

Mr. Blanton, aided by others, objected to the ruling that the Cullen beer amendment was entitled to consideration and a vote. There was a furor when the amendment was ruled in order, as had been promised by Speaker John N. Garner, of Texas, who was not, at the moment, in the presiding chair because the House was in committee of the whole. The gavel banged and banged and finally the sergeant at arms was asked to clear the aisles of members who wouldn't sit down and be quiet in response to the gavel banging.

Representative Mary T. Norton (Democrat), of New Jersey, gave dry-voting wet-drinking members an uncomfortable few minutes. She referred to the number of members of the House who voted dry, but drank in violation of the law they voted to keep on the books.

Mrs. Norton mentioned no names, however, though from the appearance of many members it seemed as if they expected her to do so. She said the prohibition law should be repealed so that members could freely vote their convictions.

Wet League Commends Defeat of Tax on Beer

In the defeat of the Cullen amendment to levy a tax on 2.75 per cent beer, the Congressional Districts Modification League feels that a serious mistake has been avoided. To place a legal tax upon an illegal product would be an extraordinary inconsistency which would certainly not increase the general public's respect for law or the wisdom of the lawmakers, the league believes.

A. J. Kummer, president of the league, stated yesterday that "the league has been unceasingly devoted to obtaining from Congress the legalization of a beer from which revenue could be collected without again putting the Government in the absurdly illogical position of imposing taxation upon what, as in the Capone case, under the present laws is illegal.

"It is a surprise to me that so few wet representatives realize that the people are demanding from Congress the right to manufacture a legalized taxable product and not to try to condone a clearly illegal act under the present laws in order to balance the budget. The league certainly does not approve of the Government collecting taxes on beer that it denies the taxpayer the right to manufacture and rejoices in the defeat of the Cullen amendment which would authorize Federal racketeering."

Greece Will Pay Debt in Advance

Announcement Is Made on 102d Anniversary of Independence.

Athens, Greece, March 25 (U.P.).—The government observed the 102d anniversary of Greek independence today by announcing that it had decided to pay £150,000 interest on foreign loans at once.

Greece is entitled to a delay in the payment. The cabinet also discussed the League of Nations finance committee's report recommending a loan to Greece and decided to grant Premier Venizelos a free hand in dealing with the situation. The premier is scheduled to outline his proposals at a meeting of party leaders at the presidential palace.

(Associated Press.)

President Hoover sent a message yesterday to President Alexander Zaimis of Greece extending his felicitations on the eighth anniversary of the proclamation of the Hellenic republic.

Beaten and Burned Child Accuses Two

Father and Woman Jailed as Girl, Aged 7, Reveals Cruelty to Teacher.

Gloversville, N. Y., March 25 (A.P.).—A little girl, 7 years old, hugging an Easter bunny to her breast, timidly played house with other children today, while her father and a woman companion were sent to jail charged with beating, burning and otherwise mistreating the child.

Alvin Trowbridge, 28-year-old mill worker, and Mrs. Anna Bruce Smith, 26, waived examination before a city judge and were locked up at Johnstown to await grand jury action. They were arrested last night, charged with assault on the Trowbridge child, Barbara Marie. Mrs. Trowbridge is divorced from her husband. She has not been found.

The story of alleged mistreatment of the child came to the attention of authorities a week ago when Barbara Marie's condition attracted the teacher of her schoolroom. She was undernourished and weighed only 37 pounds. The little girl said Mrs. Smith had burned her with a stove lifter and her father had flogged her with a strap. The father admitted punishing the child.

CHICAGO GRAIN MART DENOUNCED BY HYDE

Indifference to Interests of Farmers Is Charged on Wheat-Grade Rule.

(Associated Press.)

The Chicago Board of Trade was charged yesterday by Secretary Hyde with complete indifference to the interests of the farmer.

He made this statement in letters to Senator McNary and Representative Jones, chairmen, respectively, of the Senate and House agriculture committees, criticizing the board's action in increasing from 9 to 11 the number of deliverable wheat grades.

Immediately after the grades were increased March 12, Hyde said, the value of the new futures contract based on the larger number declined and "producers suffered a loss." He added:

"I know of no recent action which better illuminates the complete indifference of the Board of Trade to the interests of the farmer."

Says Traders Benefited.

Last summer President Hoover attacked short sellers on the grain exchanges, asserting they were operating to "rob" the farmers.

"The rules of the Chicago Board of Trade," Hyde said yesterday, "are made in the interest of sellers—not farmers. The farmer has no voice in the matter."

He used this incident to show "how necessary it is for some Federal agency to have a measure of control over the rule-making power of boards of trade."

Upon the suggestion of the Agriculture Department, Hyde said, the board reduced the number of grades from 17 to 9 in October, 1930.

Value Increase Cited.

"Immediately," he said, "the value of the new futures contract * * * increased. Producers reaped the benefits.

"When the Chicago Board of Trade again modified its rule, restoring No. 1 and No. 2 yellow hard winter to the grades deliverable at contract price, the seller's advantage was restored. The futures contract was cheapened to the value of the lowest deliverable grade. The advantage secured for farmers by the board's action in 1930 was practically wiped out by the arbitrary action of the same board in March, 1932.

"The price differential is relatively small, but the effect is far-reaching because the price of the entire crop is generally based on the poorest grade that can be delivered at the contract price."

Says Hyde Inconsistent.

Chicago, March 25 (A.P.).—Discussing Secretary Hyde's criticism that through increases in the number of deliverable wheat grades grain traders here are indifferent to the farmers interests, President Peter B. Carey, of the Chicago Board of Trade today said:

"The change in the rules of the Chicago Board of Trade making No. 1 and No. 2 yellow hard winter wheat deliverable on sales for future delivery was made about two years ago at the request of Secretary of Agriculture Hyde, and were recently altered to their original state at the request of farmers in Indiana and Illinois. These farmers claimed that they were losing $1,000,000 a year because of the yellow hard being penalized. We are not surprised at any ruling the Secretary makes, and in this case he is inconsistent."

Rebellion Memory Threatens Dublin

Efforts Are Made to Revive Thoughts of Easter Uprising in 1916.

Dublin, Irish Free State, March 25 (A.P.).—Little imitation Easter lilies made of muslin which were sold all over Dublin today and worn in hundreds of buttonholes may bring trouble to Ireland before this weekend is over.

The flower has been chosen as the emblem of Irish republicanism, for it recalls the Easter uprising of 1916. The boutonnieres bear the white, green and orange colors of the Republican flag. As a precaution against a repetition of the 1916 trouble troops of the Irish Free State army will be confined to barracks on Easter Day.

The Irish Republican army and the Cumann Na Mban, an organization of women Republicans, organized the lily sale and plastered the town with posters reproducing the proclamation of the republic of 1916. The posters called on the Irish people to unite in "one supreme effort" to break the connection with the British Empire and establish a free, sovereign Irish republic.

Legation Says Roumania To Pay Debts When Due

(Associated Press.)

The Roumania Legation issued a statement yesterday saying Roumania will meet all her current obligations when due. The legation said it was authorized to "deny emphatically the rumor, current in some financial quarters, that Roumania intends to suspend payments on her obligations abroad."

"The funds necessary to meet interest and amortization charges for the first half of the year," the statement added, "have already been deposited in the National Bank."

Stimson, Ill, Postpones Talks With Arms Envoy

(Associated Press.)

Illness of Secretary Stimson has delayed until Monday a conference with Norman H. Davis, a member of the American delegation to the disarmament conference. The Secretary of State has been ill this week with a severe cold and his physician has ordered him to stay at home for several days.

Mr. Davis had expected to come to Washington yesterday from New York, but postponed the trip when advised Mr. Stimson would prefer Monday.

MELLON SAYS SHIFT UNLIKELY ON DEBTS

(Associated Press.)

Andrew W. Mellon made one of his infrequent trips to the Capitol yesterday and left behind the comment that the European debt situation seems unchanged.

His visit was of a social nature—to become acquainted with members of the House foreign affairs committee before leaving for his new post at the Court of St. James. But in the corridors he met a barrage of reporters' questions.

"Do you think Europe will make any debt payments this year?" the new ambassador was asked while being assisted into his coat.

"You know as much about that as I do," was his quick and pleasant response.

Pressed further on the debt question, Mr. Mellon said: "I have no knowledge of any change in the situation and see no likelihood of any change at the present time."

That was as far as the former Treasury chief would go regarding the status of the international debt tangle. Within the last few days a newspaper article that Mr. Mellon would open debt negotiations in London, caused a stir in the Senate and brought a flat denial from Senator Reed, of Pennsylvania, who said he was speaking for President Hoover.

The veteran financier said he would leave Tuesday for New York and sail April 1 for Great Britain, where he does not expect his duties to be especially burdensome until the middle of May.

Mr. Mellon met old friends and associates at a dinner in his honor last night given by Ogden L. Mills, his successor as Secretary of the Treasury.

Massey Trial Set To Open April 4

Judge Will Grant Delay if Clarence Darrow Is Not Ready Then.

Honolulu, March 25 (A.P.).—Circuit Judge Charles S. Davis today tentatively set the trial of Mrs. Granville Fortescue and three others, charged with lynching Joseph Kahahawai, asserted attacker of her daughter, Mrs. Thomas H. Massie, for April 4. The judge agreed, however, to grant a delay of one week if Clarence Darrow, Chicago attorney, needs more time to prepare for the defense.

Darrow arrived only yesterday to aid in defending Mrs. Fortescue, Lieut. Massie, husband of Mrs. Massie, and E. J. Lord and Albert O. Jones, Naval enlisted men, all of whom have pleaded not guilty to charges of second-degree murder.

New York, March 25 (A.P.).—Maj. Granville R. Fortescue, whose wife is awaiting trial in Honolulu charged with the murder of a native, who was accused of having attacked her daughter, today left Presbyterian Hospital, where he has been ill for 11 weeks with pneumonia.

The doctors, he said, had not yet told him when he would be able to leave New York, but he did not expect to be able to travel inside of three weeks.

Doctor's Plea Restores Levine's Forfeited Bond

New York, March 25 (A.P.).—Charles A. Levine, first transatlantic airplane passenger, forfeited his $10,000 bail today when he failed to appear for trial on an indictment charging grand larceny.

His physician, however, presented a certificate showing he is suffering from a broken leg and cannot be moved, so execution of the forfeiture was ordered delayed until April 8. The indictment charges he obtained a loan by using stolen bonds as collateral.

Powers' Garage Burns Week After Execution

Clarksburg, W. Va., March 25 (A.P.).—One week to the hour after Harry F. Powers, West Virginia mass slayer, was hanged in the State prison, the strangely constructed garage at Quiet Dell, where the bodies of his five victims were found, was burned to the ground tonight.

BANKERS CONTINUE GLASS BILL ATTACK

Tell Senate Committee It Would Hit Legitimate Business Also.

(Associated Press.)

A succession of bankers pressed their contention before a Senate committee yesterday that the Glass banking revision bill would shoot down a lot of legitimate business as well as the stock speculation it is intended to hit.

The tall, prepossessing president of one of New York's biggest financial institutions, Percy H. Johnston, of the Chemical Bank and Trust Co., told the senators, with a wry smile, that he "would rather go back to farming in Kentucky than operate a bank" under it.

Two Missourians, Richard S. Hawes and C. W. Allendoerfer, pleaded against enactment of such "far-reaching" legislation on the ground it would delay economic recovery.

Challenged by Glass.

Hawes, a brother of the Democratic senator from Missouri, is executive vice president of the First National Bank in St. Louis, while Allendoerfer is vice president of Kansas City's First National.

Edmund S. Wolfe, president of the First National Bank and Trust Co., of Bridgeport, Conn., joined them in picking out sections of the complicated 54-page bill which they regarded as deflationary or unduly restrictive on the banks.

The contentions of the witnesses were sharply challenged by Senator Glass, of Virginia, who kept firing questions at them from the depths of a leather-covered chair.

Other members of the committee, particularly Senator Bulkley (Democrat), Ohio, joined him in telling the bankers that the measure drawn up after more than a year of study is necessary to prevent a repetition of the financial debacle of 1929.

Hold Provisions Essential.

The restrictive provisions, they reiterated, are essential to prevent the funds of the Federal Reserve system from finding their way into stock market speculation as Glass contends they did in enormous amounts in the months previous to the market collapse.

The complaint that the measure would entail too strict regulation and too much Federal control over private bankers was answered by Glass with the assertion that the present Federal Reserve law, which he helped to write, provides just as broad powers and that the bill simply establishes penalties for acts which are forbidden by the existing statue.

A statement that formation of the National Credit Corporation last October, by bankers was not "voluntary," but was undertaken on the assurance of President Hoover that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation would be formed to take over its work was made by Johnston.

Says Action Not Voluntary.

The statement was made when Senator Glass recalled the contribution of leading banks to the National Credit Corporation fund to aid smaller banks and used the word "voluntary."

Johnston, who opposed the Glass bill, replied that he would not describe the action as voluntary.

"I was in that conference at Secretary Mellon's home," he added.

"President Hoover told us he had talked to leaders in Congress and that as soon as Congress met it would form the Reconstruction Corporation to take us out of this position."

"Then you didn't do it voluntarily?" asked Senator Glass.

"We were asked to do it on that basis as a quick stop gap and we did it," Johnston replied.

Congress Is Told Duty On Creosote Unneeded

(Associated Press.)

The Tariff Commission reported to Congress yesterday that its investigation of domestic and foreign production costs had shown no need for a duty on creosote oil.

The chief competing country is the United Kingdom. The commission found that total cost of production of domestic creosote, including transportation, for the period from 1928 to 1930 was 13.01 cents a gallon, against 13.47 cents for the foreign product. Creosote oil is used principally for preserving wood.

MEAD WOULD GUARD FLIERS' UNION RIGHT

Introduces House Resolution to Insure Collective Pay Bargaining.

(Associated Press.)

The "first air strike" on Century Lines some weeks ago had an echo yesterday in a resolution by Chairman Mead, of the House postoffice committee, to insure pilots' rights to collective bargaining.

Mead's measure, based on testimony of pay-cut and right-to-organize disputes between E. L. Cord and his pilots, would direct the Postmaster General to withdraw air mail contracts and certificates from operators not recognizing pilots' rights to unionize.

Cord does not now hold mail contracts and offered to carry the mails for half present rates. Mead brought out in the hearings that Cord had purchased a substantial block of stock in Aviation Corporation, holding company for American Airways, which carries most of the mail.

Subsidizing Called Futile.

"The difficulties the pilots are now having with some of the operators, particularly the Century lines, indicate clearly the futility of subsidizing an industry which will not accord them—the pricipal element—the right to develop and improve their condition," said Mead.

"For example, if Mr. Cord secures control of American Airways or any other with mail contracts, he might put the policies acted upon by Century Lines into operation in his new venture, and the same difficulties to pilots and dangers to the traveling public would be inevitable."

Danger in Worry About Pay.

Mead said the pilot should be "free from mental hazards that make his position insecure," such as worry resulting from too small pay. He contended pilots "know enough about operation to be able to express themselves on policies and promote a better industry." He added:

"And as long as the United States is spending the country's money for aviation, with expectation of returns in national defense, the pilot is too important to leave out of the question."

Reparations Called Key to Prosperity

Strawn Asserts Europe's Business Waits Upon Adjustment.

(Associated Press.)

A prediction that European business will remain in a stagnant condition until the reparations question is settled was made yesterday by Silas H. Strawn, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

Returning from a visit to France, Germany and Great Britain, Strawn reported to the directors of the chamber that "the most urgent and immediate question before all of the important European countries is that of reparations."

He said business and trade conditions in Great Britain had improved slightly, but that France had been damaged by the general decrease in purchasing power throughout the world. He described German economic conditions as presenting a most serious situation.

Americans of Nanking Told Return Seems Safe

(Associated Press.)

Americans who evacuated Nanking due to Sino-Japanese hostilities have been informed by Willys R. Peck, the United States consul general, that it is apparently safe for them to return.

The State Department was so advised yesterday in a cablegram from Nanking. Peck pointed out, however, there could be no official guarantee that normal conditions had been restored.

Several thousand circulars denouncing the treatment of William Brown, 16-year-old Negro, awaiting trial for the slaying of 7-year-old Dorothy Lutz, as a "frame-up," were confiscated by the raiders and a fourth man was arrested while distributing the circulars on a street corner.

G. O. P. Considers Smith Fund Quiz

(Associated Press.)

Some Senate Republicans are weighing the possibility of seeking Senate inquiry into the charges of fraudulent financing of the 1928 Smith presidential campaign.

Senator Dickinson (Republican), Iowa, the author of a resolution for investigation of 1932 presidential and senatorial campaign expenditures, said yesterday he believed this inquiry, if authorized, would have authority to go into the allegations by Patrick F. Kenny regarding a bank note to finance Alfred E. Smith's campaign.

"I have no personal interest in the matter," said Dickinson, "and I have not enough facts to ask for the investigation of 1928, but I do believe if my resolution were adopted we could go into the Kenny charges."

U. S. Plans World Criminals' Gallery

(Associated Press.)

An international rogues' gallery is being established by the Justice Department to aid in apprehension of criminals.

The program, sponsored by J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Bureau of Investigation, calls for an exchange of fingerprints of all alien criminals or persons believed to be natives or citizens of a foreign country who run afoul of the law.

Police authorities in Great Britain, France, Belgium, Italy and Havana already have notified Hoover of their willingness to cooperate.

GUN PROVIDES CLEW IN GROCER'S DEATH

Discovery yesterday of a .45-caliber automatic pistol believed to have been the weapon used in the murder revivified the investigation by Montgomery County authorities into the death of Horace D. Waters, 79-year-old grocer, of Old Germantown, Md., who was shot to death by holdup men January 20 at his store. The pistol was found by Mrs. Harry Burns, who lives about a mile from the store.

Mrs. Burns was cleaning up her yard when she found the weapon which she turned over to police. An examination showed that the pistol had been fired twice and had jammed on the third shot. It was turned over to Lieut. Fred Sandberg of the Washington Police Department, who will make an examination for possible fingerprints. An effort also will be made to ascertain the owner of the pistol by checking on the serial number.

More than 20 men and women were arrested by county and Washington police in an effort to solve the murder but all subsequently were released. Richard A. Bennett, 68, a clerk, was shot in the wrist when he started to the assistance of Mr. Waters. A 38-caliber revolver was found near the scene of the shooting, ownership of which police were trying to trace. An investigation of the shooting is being made by the Montgomery County grand jury.

Lilies
"Consider the Lilies of the Field"
Flowers are the most practical thing in all the world. Flowers teach us the beauty of simplicity and service. Flowers quicken our sensibilities and ambitions and cause us to vision larger rewards and to reach out for them. They uplift our standards. They teach us sincerity—there are no shams in flowers. They show us the wisdom of brotherly kindness and cooperation. A single Lily does not make much show. Many Lilies growing together transform a barren spot and send forth perfume that reaches, like incense, to Heaven.
"But flowers soon fade," I hear you object. Not so. Rich garments are at the mercy of a moth, marble crumbles, metals rust away. Beauty alone remains, imperishable, it lives forever in our hearts.
Psychologists inform us that the way to keep our youth is to daily renew our minds and spirits with thoughts of youth and hope and beauty, of love and kindness to all humanity, and to surround ourselves with the fresh, the fragrant, the lovely things of life. With these ideals in mind, we may discover new and deeper meanings in the simple words, "Consider the lilies of the field."

ALL ITALY MOURNS JESUS' CRUCIFIXION

Good Friday Ceremonies Are Held With Elaborate Preparations.

Rome, March 25 (A.P.).—Italy mourned tonight the crifixion of Christ with traditional Good Friday ceremonies, picturesque processions, prayer and silence.

In St. Peter's, Cardinal Pacelli, papal secretary of state, presided over the "Miserere" and "Tenebae" mourning services, at their conclusion the clergy banged with their prayerbooks on the kneeling benches to represent the confusion of nature at the death of Christ.

Pope Pius XI attended services in his private chapel, with prelates of the pontificial court.

The titular churches of Cardinal Mundelein, of Chicago, and Cardinal Hayes, of New York—Santa Maria del Popolo and Santa Maria in Via, respectively, both dedicated to the Virgin Mary—held "Maria Desolata" (Mary desolate) services. These consisted of a sermon on the Virgin's sorrows, the Rosary and hyms.

Tens of thousands flocked to the little town of Grassina, near Florence, where the Italian equivalent of the Oberamergau Passion Play was given. It was called "Gesu Morto," or "Jesus Dead."

"Jesu Morto" began with an enormous procession representing the tragic journey to Calvary. Under a black canopy was a figure of Christ lying on a bier borne by a dozen peasants.

The procession wound up on adjoining hill. On the summit three huge crosses rose among the cypresses. The throng knelt around the crosses and prayed.

Afterward came the traditional blessing of farm animals. Horses, oxen and sheep were led into the village chapels and marched up to the altar. There priests blessed them with holy water.

At Nerano, near the northeastern frontier, hundreds of men carried large wooden crosses in procession tonight. The women bore flowers. All the buildings along the line of march were illuminated.

Throughout Italy all theaters and places of amusement were closed tonight.

Italians Carry Cross In Good Friday Rites

Trento, Italy, March 25 (U.P.).—An ancient custom was revived today when residents of the Fiamme Valley celebrated the Passion by carrying a gigantic illuminated cross from the town of Cavalez to the summit of Bello Hill.

Minnesota and New York Vie in Drive for Jobs

New York, March 25 (A.P.).—A mere 83 jobs tonight separated Minnesota and New York for leadership in the Nation-wide drive to put a million persons to work.

Minnesota, which has led the united action group's campaign except for a few days since it was started six weeks ago, added 172 wage earners to bring its grand total to 31,166. New York meanwhile was adding 455 jobs for a grand total of 31,083. Neither State's daily figure was near the 2,206 jobs Texas reported as the Nation-wide total for the campaign rose to 336,001 on a wave of 9,092 jobs reported from 37 States.

Mack Sennett, Film Producer, Now Citizen

Los Angeles, March 25 (A.P.).—Mack Sennett, who made pie-heaving the fashion in motion picture comedies, became a citizen of the United States today.

Sennett, who was born Michael Sinnott in Canada in 1880, took the oath of citizenship in the court of Federal Judge Harry Hollzer, but he became a citizen just a day too late to vote at the May primaries. The film comedy producer will cast his first vote at the congressional primaries next August.

BAN ON PROMOTIONS LIKELY IN PAY BILL

Failure of the committee to reach an agreement on pay cuts yesterday was not unexpected. It generally was felt that the committee had no desire to make the terms of the salary cut measure public far in advance of its report to the House as a rider to the legislative appropriations bill. And the legislative bill will not be reported until Monday.

Pay cut advocates on the committee still confidently predicted that a bill of some sort would be approved, with the group nearly evenly divided as to whether the measure should be a flat 11 per cent percentage slash, or the cut apportioned on a graduated scale.

Despite these predictions, there were signs of reaction in pay cut sentiment on the hill, as 48 American Federation of Labor leaders from every State in the Union continued their canvass of every member of Congress, under leadership of Edward R. McGrady, legislative committeeman.

Green In Conference.

The canvass followed a conference between President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, and Representative Fiorello H. LaGuardia, (Republican), New York, who will fight to defeat any pay cut bill that gets before the House.

The labor "lobbyists" were operating out of the office of Representative William P. Connery, jr., (Democrat), Massachusetts, also a bitter opponent of pay reduction. Leaders were seeking to bring home to Congressmen the danger of inaugurating a sweeping downward movement in American living standards, in lending government sanction to the pay cut movement.

William R. Vallance, president of the Federal Bar association, was granted a hearing earlier yesterday before Representative John McDuffie's "pay cut" subcommittee of the House economy committee.

Mr. Vallance led a delegation of four, which included William A. Roberts, assistant corporation counsel. They told subcommittee members that salary slashes planned probably would cost the government the services of its best lawyers, who would [illegible] for more remunerative fields.

Prosperous Siam Is Called Land Lacking Economic Ills

Globe-Trotter, Who Conducted Newspaper for King Prajadhipok, Returns to U. S. With Picture of Contentment There; Nation Held Solvent.

New York, March 25 (A.P.).—Faraway Siam, where a man's wealth is gauged by the number of wives he has, was pictured today by Andrew Freeman, globe trotter, as a land of great contentment, where the economic ills of the rest of the world are unknown.

The lot of women, he said, is not so bad as the multiwife standard would make it appear; the natives are thoroughly satisfied to be ruled by an absolute monarch, and the country is so prosperous a New York banker recently said it and Venezuela are the only solvent nations on the map.

"It probably is the only place on earth where there is no starvation right now," said the young man, who has returned to his Long Island home from the land of the white elephant, where he managed King Prajadhipok's own newspaper.

He sees in little Siam—with one exception the only absolute monarchy in the world—a bulwark of the present economic system against demands for a new order of things.

"Not only will it resist mightily any attempt to make it communistic," he said, "but it also will be the last country on earth to become a democracy."

In the face of hostility from natives and white men alike, Freeman built the king's paper from a four-page sheet, with a circulation of 50, into a modern newspaper resembling a New York tabloid, with more than 5,000 readers.

They threatened his life. He faced one libel suit after another. He was constantly in trouble, but when he left Siam shops were closed and the whole city turned out to bid him bon voyage.

In 1927 he tried to convince the king he could "put Siam on the map" by visiting the United States. His arguments were ignored at first, but last year the king made the long trip.

While Freeman thinks polygamy will never be abolished in Siam by law, he said many educated young women were taking oaths never to marry unless they are the only wives.

Gradually, he thinks, monogamy will "come into its own" because of this feeling.

HOOVER ASSERTS HIS FAITH IN BIPARTY BUDGET PLEDGE

aggravated by the initial failure of governments to balance their budgets promptly when the postwar depression affected their countries." No one who had heard the several national reports to the council of the International Chamber at Paris could have missed that truth, he added.

At the conclusion of the meeting the chamber's directors unanimously adopted a resolution expressing the conviction: "For the public welfare, there can be no alternative for a balanced budget."

The text of the resolution follows: "Balancing the national budget through proper measures of economy and taxation is the first essential for improvement in the country's economic position. It will strengthen credit, public and private. It will give opportunity for that confidence which will permit business to go forward. It will prepare the way for increased employment. For the public welfare, there can be no alternative for a balanced budget.

Appeal to Business Men.

"Every economy should be put into effect. Drastic cuts in Government expenditures can and must be made. Such reductions depend upon the readiness of every one to forego special interest in appropriations. Supporting Congress in reducing total expenditures means supporting Congress in reducing particular expenditures.

"To balance the budget, under present conditions it requires not only the strictest economy in expenditures, but additional taxes, carefully framed. In levying such taxes, great care and fairness should prevail so as not to dry up important sources of income and discourage business enterprise on which employment depends.

"We appeal to the public spirit of Congress to review very carefully methods and rates, but to aim unswervingly to the essential objective of a balanced budget.

"We appeal to business men everywhere to abstain from critical objections, to manifest their willingness to aid Congress in this problem. This emergency calls for placing the national welfare above all other considerations so that the credit of our Government shall not be placed in jeopardy, and we appeal to all other organizations to join with us in this patriotic movement."

Treasury Outlook Described.

President Hoover said his statement was in response to "many hundred inquiries from different parts of the country as to prospects of balancing the budget, and for other information connected therewith."

He then summarized the present fiscal outlook for the Federal Treasury, pointing out that the prospective deficit for the fiscal year, 1933, excluding any reduction in the $18,000,000,000 national debt, now is estimated at about $1,250,000,000. This follows a deficit of some $500,000,000 in 1931, and approximately $2,000,000,000 in 1932—also calculated on the basis of no retirement of the national debt.

"These deficiencies are almost wholly due to decrease in tax receipts," he continued. "We must eliminate this deficit for next year by the further reduction of governmental expenditures and by increases in taxation. * * * * * * Further economies can be made, and I am confident will be made, through authority of the Congress to eliminate unnecessary functions of the Government or in postponement of less essential activities, together with businesslike reorganization and coordination of Government activities. The appropriation and economy committees of the Congress are now earnestly engaged on all these problems.

"But when all this is done the balancing of the budget must in the main be accomplished by an increase in taxation, which will restore Government revenues."

Borrowing Only Postpones.

Recalling that most of the great nations of Europe long have been under tax schedules far more burdensome that would be required to balance the United States budget forthwith, the President repeated that "the Government, no more than individual families, can continue to expend more than it receives without inviting serious consequences."

"To continue to live on borrowed money only postpones the difficulty and in the meantime begets all manner of new evils and dangers, which create costs and losses to every workman, every farmer and every businessman far in excess of the cost of courageous action in balancing the budget.

"The American people are no less courageous and no less wise than the people of other nations."

Market Shook Postponed.

That kindly fate which so frequently mitigates the miseries flowing from human folly closed all of the security exchanges of the world yesterday, in observance of Good Friday. As a result the full shock of Thursday's wild disorder in the House of Representatives was averted, and the flood of selling which might ordinarily have followed such a spectacle was postponed. And while it appears improbable that any real buoyancy can come to the stock market until the House finds itself, the renewed assurances from President Hoover that every effort will be made to restore sanity through nonpartisan cooperation for the national welfare, may soften the blow of liquidation in the half-day markets today.

Moreover, there is available for today's markets the restoring influence of the regular monthly economic survey of the Federal Reserve Board, which chronicles an impressive improvement in banking and finance during the last six weeks; and a recapitulation by President Hoover of the operations of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation since its establishment early in February.

Noting the definite improvement in the banking and credit situation since about February 1, the Federal Reserve review repeated that "the improvement in conditions is indicated by a pronounced decline in the number of bank failures, by a strengthening of the bond market and by a return flow of currency from the public to the banks."

$234,981,714 Already Lent.

The President's review of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation's operations, revealed that a total of $234,981,714 has been lent to date. Of this sum, $126,895,073 has been allotted to 587 banks and trust companies in 45 States. Less than $3,500,000 has been authorized in cities of more than 1,000,000 population, and more than $116,000,000 in towns of under 600,000 population. The average loan per institution has been $216,162.

Other loans have been made as follows:

Eighteen building and loan associations, $2,917,000, an average of $162,055 for each applicant.

Thirteen insurance companies, $5,765,000; average $443,461.

Two joint stock land banks, $775,000; average $387,500.

Three mortgage loan companies, $1,362,000; average $454,000.

One live stock credit association, $292,084.

Bay State Political Impasse Reached

Boston, March 25 (A.P.).—Massachusetts Democrats, divided in their allegiance to Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt and Alfred E. Smith as potential nominees for the Presidency, tonight appeared destined to engage in a bitter fight for delegates to the national convention in Chicago in June.

The closing time for withdrawals of delegate candidates to the Republican and Democratic conventions found both the Smith and Roosevelt forces silently adamant in their refusal to reach a compromise of one Democratic slate. The Roosevelt forces retained a complete slate, although there were several last-minute withdrawals and substitutions. The Smith slate was complete except for the vacancy caused by the withdrawal of Mrs. Helen I. McGillicuddy, of Boston, a candidate for delegate at large.

The Republican party had a full slate in the field pledged to support President Hoover for renomination. A few withdrawals had reduced contests for district delegates to the First, Ninth and Eleventh districts.

Miller Posts Bond For Auction Row

Calmly Responds to Law for Firing of Shotgun; Fourth Suit Delayed.

Newkirk, Okla., March 25. (A.P.)—Col. Zack Miller responded to the law today for his trigger finger defiance of a receiver's auction sale of the equipment of the 101 Ranch. The last of the Miller brothers, founders of the famous ranch, came calmly to County Court for arraignment on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon. Yesterday he fired a shotgun into his ranch house floor behind a redeiver's attorney as a protest against the auction.

County Judge R. M. Parkhurst accepted bail of $15,000 as well as $1,000 peace bond, pending a preliminary hearing April 15. Col. Miller, his face drawn with illness, did not enter a plea.

A fourth foreclosure suit against the ranch lands was postponed here today until April 13, and at the same time hope was expressed by Former Gov. Henry S. Johnston, counsel for the rancher-showman, that aid may be forthcoming for Col. Miller through negotiations with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

BEHREND, ENGINEER, DIES OF PISTOL SHOT

Noted Electrical Authority, Bullet Through Heart, Is Believed Suicide.

Wellesley, Mass., March 25 (A.P.).—A policeman forced his way into the home of Bernard A. Behrend, 56, internationally known authority on electricity and engineer, today and found Mr. Behrend dead on the floor. A pistol lay beside the body and police told Mrs. Behrend when she reached the house later her husband apparently had shot himself.

The policeman was called by Charles McGillis, of Waltham, who had driven Mr. Behrend to his home from Cambridge. He said he was instructed to wait outside, but when Mr. Behrend failed to return McGillis tried to get into the house and found it locked. He became suspicious and called a policeman. Dr. Frederic A. Stanwood, assistant medical examiner, said Mr. Behrend had been shot through the heart but declined any further statement.

Mr. Behrend had been ill recently and had been a patient at the Cambridge Hospital.

He was born in Villeneuve, Switzerland, and was educated in England and Germany. He had served as nonresident lecturer at McGill University, in Montreal, and at the University of Wisconsin and Stanford University.

In 1904 he was awarded the gold medal of the St. Louis Exposition and the John Scott medal of the Franklin Institute in 1912. He had served as a member of the committee on organization of the International Electrical Congress in St. Louis in 1904.

Mr. Behrend had served as chief engineer of the Bullock Electric Manufacturing Co., of Cincinnati, and as chief electrical engineer and consulting engineer of the Allis-Chalmers Co. and Allis-Chalmers-Bullock, Ltd., Montreal. At one time he was advisory engineer of the Westinghouse Co. and some of the largest electrical units ever manufactured by these companies were designed by him.

Mr. Behrend also had written several books and monographs on alternating currents, motors and generators.

W. A. Clark's Daughter Files $250,000 Suit

New York, March 25 (A.P.).—Mrs. Mary Clark De Brabant, daughter of the late William A. Clark, former United States Senator and mine operator, has filed suit for $250,000 against the New York Central Railroad and the Pullman Co.

She alleges in the suit, disclosed in the Supreme Court today, that she was injured when thrown from an upper berth of a Montreal-to-New York train on September 27, 1927. Her counsel filed a motion to examine before trial George I. Washington, a porter. Both companies denied knowledge of the accident.

SUED CAMPAIGN AID HITS RASKOB POLICY

Timothy Mara, $50,000 Note Signer, Says Chairman Poses as Benefactor.

New York, March 25 (A.P.).—Timothy J. Mara, sports promoter, who is being sued by the County Trust Co. for payment of a $50,000 note he signed during the 1928 presidential campaign, issued a statement today, asking why John J. Raskob, indorser of the note, did not pay the $50,000 and then sue him.

He challenged Mr. Raskob to have him prosecuted for perjury, accused the chairman of the Democratic national committee of "a lack of knowledge of politics," and said Mr. Raskob was anxious to have himself recognized as "the only chairman who was able to bring the committee out of debt."

Mr. Mara and Patrick F. Kenny, Yonkers contractor, who is being sued for payment of $20,000, have said they were asked to sign the notes at a conference of Democratic leaders in the "Tiger room" of a New York millionaire's quarters.

They have stated they did so merely as an accommodation to the County Trust Co. in furtherance of a scheme to conceal contributions by the company to the Democratic campaign fund of 1928.

Both insist they turned the money over at once to the campaign chest; that they got none of it themselves, and that they understood they would never be called on to make good the amount of the notes.

I. C. C. RIFT WITH LOAN BODY SEEN IN RAIL CREDIT MOVE

tion yesterday, was an emphatic assertion that the action was not intended to form a definite policy for all railroad loans. Officials said that in each individual case the circumstances surrounding the application would be the governing force.

The corporation forced the commission to act with a resolution adopted by its directors on March 18, the same day as the White House conferences. This resolution authorized a loan to the Missouri Pacific on condition that the Interstate Commerce Commission give its approval and that the banks turn over half of the road's collateral that they hold. It also provided that such other collateral as the commission might require be turned in.

The loan would not have been legal without Interstate Commerce Commission approval. The Interstate Commerce act requires that all loans to railroads have the approval of the commission.

Takes Rap at Bankers.

The commission, although yielding, took a slap at the bankers who had refused to extend the loans.

"The bankers who hold the loans are bankers for the carrier," said the opinion. "As such they have profited largely in handling its financing in the past. It is often represented to us that the relation of the banker to a railroad is very valuable to it because of the banking assistance so rendered available in time of stress; that a railroad can afford to compensate its bankers well in connection with its regular financing in order to have such support available when needed.

"We have therefore thought that theory to have more merit than this transaction appears to indicate."

Although the decision to grant the loan was unanimous, Commissioner Eastman in a brief individual opinion expressed the belief that there was no necessity for a Government loan.

"Morgan & Co., Kuhn, Loeb & Co., and the Guaranty Trust Co." he asserted, "would not, so long as the interest on these bank loans is paid, force a receivership by refusing an extension. The repercussions would be much too dangerous in other quarters where the private interests of these financial institutions are involved."

Announcement on Credits.

President Hoover's announcement yesterday revealed that a total of 587 banks and trust companies have received $126,804,073. The average loan to banks and trust companies totaled $216,162.

Building and loan associations totaling eighteen have received $2,917,000, an average of $162,055 per association.

A total of thirteen insurance companies have received loans of $5,765,000, or an average loan per company of $443,461.

Railroads have received $46,975,557. A total of thirteen carriers has been assisted with the average loan being $3,613,504.

Two joint stock land banks have received $775,000 and three mortgage loan companies have received $1,362,000. In addition to $50,000,000 turned over to the Secretary of Agriculture for agricultural loans the corporation has loaned $292,084 to one live stock credit association.

Missouri Pacific Loan Moves Cause Confusion

New York, March 25 (A.P.).—While no formal statement was forthcoming today from interested bankers regarding the arrangements under which $50,000,000 is to be loaned to the Missouri Pacific Railroad, the announcement in connection with the loan yesterday by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation caused considerable confusion in financial circles.

Although the loan was announced as a loan to the railroad, it was understood that the money would be used to pay off bank loans of the railroad, which are due in installments during the next few months.

Bankers were unable to understand why the railroad should borrow money to pay off bank loans when it could borrow the money from the bankers themselves.

Some bankers were of the opinion that the loan was made to the railroad in order to relieve the bankers of some of their frozen loans, and that the bankers would be required to turn over to the railroad the proceeds of the loan.

Others were of the opinion that the loan was made to the railroad in order to relieve the bankers of some of their frozen loans, and that the bankers would be required to turn over to the railroad the proceeds of the loan.

Others were of the opinion that the loan was made to the railroad in order to relieve the bankers of some of their frozen loans, and that the bankers would be required to turn over to the railroad the proceeds of the loan.

Armistice Urged In Miners' Strike

First Peace Move Made by Guard Official to End Suffering.

Columbus, Ohio, March 25 (A.P.).—An armistice to permit reopening of the Hocking Valley coal mines pending settlement of a wage dispute which caused a strike of 7,000 men February 1 was suggested tonight by Brig. Gen. Ludwig S. Conelly, commanding Ohio National Guard observers in the district.

"The operators and miners should get together on the minor things to carry out the obligations of parents to their children," the general said. "Apparently thousands of children are underfed and underclothed and don't know why. All they know is that they are hungry."

Gen. Conelly's statement marked the first definite peace move of the strike, which seemed today to have settled down to a battle of words between State officials and the owners.

Hearing Theory Is Upset By Research Workers

New York, March 25 (A.P.).—An experiment claimed by its authors to upset the long-held theory that hearing is the result of vibration in the membranes of the ear was explained today for the benefit of the American Society of Anatomists.

Dr. Walter Hughson, of the Johns Hopkins School of Medicine, and a coworker, Dr. S. J. Crowe, said they had immobilized the round window membrane in the inner ear of a cat to prevent it from vibrating and found that the animal's hearing was improved thereby.

BALANCE THE BUDGET.

President Hoover sends to the American people and to Congress a message that combines confidence and admonition. The budget must be balanced. The President is confident that both political parties will succeed in their efforts to balance the budget, notwithstanding the defeat of the sales tax. He asks the public to support Congress in all sound efforts to both reduce expenditures and adjust taxation. He gives this admonition:

> The Government no more than individual families can continue to expend more than it receives without inviting serious consequences. To continue to live on borrowed money only postpones the difficulty and in the meantime begets all manner of new evils and dangers, which create costs and losses to every workman, every farmer and every business man far in excess of the cost of courageous action in balancing the budget.

Failure to trim expenditures and provide revenue to balance the budget will lead to additional bond issues—that is, mere borrowing by a hard-up Government. This borrowing can be done, but it would be at a heavy cost. The value of outstanding Government bonds can not remain high when additional bonds are offered. No corporation can hope to float bonds, for refunding or for expansion of business, when Government bonds are a drug on the market. The great industries of the United States must remain stagnant unless they can finance themselves. Unemployment must prevail until industry recovers. This is referred to by the President when he states that costs and losses will fall upon every workman, every farmer, and every business man unless the national budget is balanced.

Of what avail is the creation of great reconstruction corporations, handling Government money, if the Government itself is to be a borrower? The money borrowed would go to bolster up one industry after another which would not need help if it could issue bonds. The Government can not forever take borrowed money and devote it to the maintenance of profitless and stagnant industries. The process could not fail to end in national bankruptcy, resulting from the total loss of confidence in the Government itself.

When Congress balances the national budget it really balances the budget of American enterprise, from the biggest to the smallest business. Unless the Government is made solvent it is idle to expect industries to recover. No industrial recovery can occur if the United States Government leads the way in plunging deeper into debt, carrying down its credit and finally meeting with refusal when it offers its "securities" to a Nation without work or means of livelihood. The Government is the American people en masse. If they can not as an entirety pay their way as they go along, how can individuals or industries or communities expect to avoid a crash?

The sales tax was equitable. It has been beaten. Now Congress is casting about for other means of raising revenue. The problem is to raise the necessary revenue without dealing unfairly with any one. It is a most perplexing problem, but it can be solved if national legislators will put aside politics and work unitedly for the public welfare in this emergency.

A SYMBOL OF FAITH.

The launching of the palatial steamship Santa Rosa, at Kearny, N. J., on Thursday, was an event well worth national notice. It symbolized something even finer than itself. In the message which President Hoover sent to the persons assembled for the ceremony, he said: "At no time since the glorious American clipper ship era has the Nation displayed such a keen interest in its ship activities. The determination of the American people to possess a first-class merchant marine has resulted in the establishment of a network of regular and dependable ocean service to all the principal ports of the world, where our flag is again a familiar sight—a symbol of friendship and good will in the development and expansion of international trade."

The President's message was carried by Postmaster General Brown, a fitting delegate, since to him is due much credit for his encouragement of the merchant marine in the matter of mail contracts, a policy in which his department has effectively cooperated with the Shipping Board and other Government agencies. It goes without saying that the merchant marine is abundantly entitled to assistance of this kind.

It is a courageous and inspiring thing that the Grace Line executives have brought their fine new ship to completion in times like the present. They have set an example for business men in all industries. They have taken hold of the future. They have challenged circumstance, and they have won. It is a stimulating achievement for the whole country. It is a symbol of returning sanity.

COWARDS! TRAITORS!

The beer-loving part of the population has good cause to view with disgust the treason of some of their boasted champions in the House. There is no hypocrisy in the ranks of those who like beer. What they want is beer—good, high-power beer, with a big and prompt kick in it. They have been fubbed off with near-beer, sarsaparilla, pop and gassed milk until they are thoroughly disgusted. The hope of obtaining genuine beer, by the simple device of imposing a tax, revived and even intoxicated the spirits of many a good citizen, and the fateful hour for a vote in the House was awaited with bated breath.

Then what did they do, these champions of real beer? They hemmed and hawed, they faltered, and finally they offered an amendment proposing a tax on 2.75 per cent beer. What is 2.75 beer? Mere slop; an insult to thirst; a skulking, cowardly counterfeit; a traitor to hope and an assassin of faith. Yet 132 members of the House had the effrontery to vote to tax and therefore legalize this abominable stuff, under the pretense that they were really trying to circumvent the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act!

The "bigots" who voted against the tax on 2.75 per cent beer were the real protectors of the people, after all, for they at least prevented the House from declaring by implication that 2.75 slop is actually beer. That would have been a fatal declaration, because it would have discouraged those who still hope that beer, when it does come, will come as beer and not as an accursed, hypocritical imitation. Once the House had committed itself to 2.75 slop, it would have had difficulty in reversing itself and coming out for the true, the blissful Hippocrene. The drys thus befriended the long-suffering ones who want certainty in their beer. The so-called wets of the House who voted for a tax on 2.75 "beer" were traitors to Gambrinus. Down with all cowards, say we!

DEMOCRATIC TARIFF SPLIT.

Democrats in the Senate have begun a drive for enactment of their face-saving tariff bill. Coming immediately after the split of the Democratic party on the tax bill, this movement is particularly interesting because it involves another breach in the ranks of that party.

As it came from the House, the Democratic tariff bill carried the unmistakable brand of the insurgent-Democratic coalition. It was so outrageous that even the Democrats of the Senate repudiated it and brought in a new measure. The House bill was reported adversely by the Senate finance committee, and the current discussion centers upon Senator Harrison's substitute.

With naive disregard for the Constitution, the Democratic House passed a bill authorizing the Tariff Commission to levy a duty or change existing rates on any commodity. Its edicts would become effective within 60 days unless nullified by Congress. At present the power of the commission is limited to recommending revision of rates on dutiable goods within a range of 50 per cent. The commission is merely a mechanism for working out the equalization of costs of production here and abroad. It has no power to levy new imposts. The Supreme Court has held repeatedly that Congress may not delegate its powers.

Some Democratic leaders in the Senate concede that the House bill would be unconstitutional. Under the inspiration of Senator Harrison they have brought forth a new masterpiece intended to destroy the flexible provision and restore to Congress the duty of making emergency changes in rates. Here are represented two extremes. The House bill, if enacted, would be the most drastic tariff law ever written. It would initiate the policy of levying a duty on every article that costs more to produce in the United States than in other countries. The immense volume of raw material needed here to supply American industries might be subject to prohibitive rates. The free list, which now embraces two-thirds of all American imports, would be virtually abolished unless Congress stepped in to correct its blunder.

Democrats in the Senate can not be blamed for killing this monstrosity. But they go to the other extreme of attempting to deprive American industry, agriculture and labor of the benefits of tariff adjustments in this critical period. Talk of flexible tariff machinery to be operated by Congress is pure nonsense. The effect of the Harrison bill would be to arrest all rate adjustments at a time when most of the nations selling goods to the United States are off the gold standard, prices are undergoing critical deflation and the pressure of surplus foreign production upon the American market is more acute than for many years.

The administrative features of either the House bill or the Harrison substitute would be a blow to American enterprise. The Democrats would find it difficult enough to defend either one of them, but when they try to defend both they pile up trouble for their party and their next candidate for President. Why do they insist upon splitting their party, besides arousing the antagonism of industry and labor?

FORLORN HOPES FOR SILVER.

The House has run away with the Senate committee's silver campaign. A year ago senatorial emissaries began traveling to the far corners of the world to investigate monetary conditions in other nations and to sound out sentiment in the hope of doing something for silver. The suggestion was made that the President call an international conference on the subject, but following the declination of this Government to sponsor such a meeting other nations also declined to take the lead.

Now the House committee on coinage has extended world-wide invitations to Government officials, bankers and economists to express opinions on the advisability of an international silver conference. In addressing his foreign correspondents, Chairman Somers asked for an expression as to whether "prompt international cooperation is not only desirable but imperative at this time and whether it can be effected only through international conference." Referring to the irregularity, if not impropriety, of addressing foreign powers in this manner, Chairman Somers says: "We are confronting a situation whose seriousness can not be overemphasized. When there are some of us who think conditions can be helped, why should we sit by and let things go to pot and let the world totter just because of some silly little precedent?"

Added importance was given the project by the appearance before the committee this week of Bernard M. Baruch to support an international move to consider the stabilization of silver.

Chairman Somers has undertaken a big task in his endeavor to get the nations of the world together at the present time for the relief of silver, bearing in mind the tendency of all important commercial nations to utilize less and less of silver as a monetary metal, even in subsidiary coins. England is off the gold standard, but there is no indication that it leans toward silver, and the pound even at its lowered value is reckoned in its relation to gold.

Two fallacies are always given undue importance in all the special pleading that is made in behalf of silver. One is to attribute inherent qualities to silver which do not exist, since it has become simply one of the world's commodities, and to exaggerate the importance of the silver industry. The other is the exploded argument that the trade of the Orient has been ruined by the low price of silver. Silver flows in a steady stream to India and China, and stays there. Nearly one-half of all the silver that has been mined since 1492 has gone to the Orient. It is there to stay. It does not come out again to pay for imports. Today England is rejoicing over the hope that cheap money will stimulate her exports and help to pay for more of what she buys abroad. The same thing happens in China. Cheap silver naturally encourages exports, with which she pays for imports.

Even if the nations could be called into a conference it would be a hopeless undertaking to convince them that they would profit by trying to give to silver a false and fictitious value.

ON COLLECTORS

By LADY ADAMS, in the Boston Transcript.

The best conversational opening, to any man, above the age of 3, that I have yet discovered, is: "What do you collect?"

Every male collects something, and he is only too glad to tell you all about it. Even if he does not collect, he used to, and the tale of why he no longer collects is usually rather tragic, and ends: "And so you see why I don't collect any longer."

They all begin, these men, in the same way. Shells on the beach, worms, rabbits, eggs, stamps (an angel of 5 once told me he had a collection of three stamps). They go on to butterflies, cigarette pictures, crests—since the war hardly anybody has crested notepaper—and gradually quality takes the place of quantity.

Then comes the prints and Toby-jugs phase, and quietly they settle down to the collection of their lives. And that may or may not be a money-making concern. If I were a father, and were making cautious inquiries about my daughter's best beau, I would ascertain what he collected, and I would be relieved if his tastes lay in the direction of first numbers of magazines, bought hot off the book-stall, on the day of publication, for the original price of a quarter or a dime, rather than in the line of first editions, hundreds of years old, that increase in cost from year to year.

Of course, collecting pays—at times. A friend of ours, with an inherited as well as an acquired knowledge of coins, collected them, quietly and unostentatiously, in out-of-the-way places, mostly in back streets in Italy, every vacation, as student and professor. He sold his little lot for $30,000, and built himself a country house. The day after he sold his collection he began another one. He sold it, and laid out the gardens, specializing in roses. He began his third coin collection the day he sold his rose-garden one; this time, he says, he is going to keep his coins.

Another friend collects something that costs him nothing—railway tickets. He began in his agile youth, in Scotland, when dodging the legitimate collector was part of the game. The ticket was just proof he had dodged successfully. For some reason, probably a prudent one, he has stopped collecting them himself, but he expects that when his friends and younger relatives go a-journeying in far countries, they shall bring him back as many samples of the tickets of other lands as they can. He has now a world-wide collection.

Those vicarious collectors are trying. In the days of the picture-postcard craze, our small nephews and nieces used to hail the news that their uncle and I were going abroad, with joy. "Try to go to as many out-of-the-way countries as you possibly can," they used to say, "and be sure to go to a new place every day and send us a few picture postcards from every place."

There She Goes!

POST HASTE.

Mr. Crisp offered to give up his chairmanship, but Maj. LaGuardia's victory has not yet brought him a tender of House leadership from Speaker Jack.

With the sales tax out, soaking the rich will not do the trick; it will be necessary to parboil them.

Real Republicans supported the Democratic sales tax, and Jack Garner's boys are doubtless just waiting to reciprocate on the original Mellon tax proposals.

Chairman Crisp struck the bovine's optic when he said: "There are more members of the House who are willing to vote for expenditures than there are willing to vote for taxes necessary to meet those expenditures."

More taxes for automobiles, gasoline and parts! Where can we invest in a good bicycle or roller skate factory?

Speaker Garner, from the great open spaces of the West, thought he knew something about handling wild jackasses, but the burros of the boroughs of the Bronx threw him.

As if July heat in Washington were not enough, here is Joe Robinson threatening a return engagement of Congress after the Chicago conventions.

Speaking of women's rights, is it right for the Democratic committee to load all that bunk on Vice Chairman Nellie Ross for her broadcasts?

Those teeth you hear gnashing are Senator Borah's—he hasn't been able to get them into anything lately.

From the solemn protests that Japan is making she must be contemplating some new move.

We have the advantage of England. If the Irish Free State gets gay with us we can quickly bring it to time by threatening an import tax on policemen.

"Some foreign securities are sound." And many purchasers are "full of sound and fury."

If Marquis of Queensbury rules had been in force in the House on Thursday, Business Recovery could not have received such a punch below the belt.

Prophecies as to what Democratic control would do with the first long rope it was allowed to play with came true.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST.

EVENING AT HOME.

When comes the evening hour and I
Have heard no call to sally forth
Or east or west or south or north
To dance while night time hurries by,
Or skill at contract bridge to try,

My lady, wondrous sweet and fair,
Who has adventured much with me,
And knows my habits to a T,
Says coldly: "If you nestle there,
You'll fall asleep and I declare,
I'll sit alone, as oft before,
Hearing the music of your snore."

"No! No!" I say, "I'll merely doze,
Take 40 winks, and then I swear
We'll play at double solitaire,
Or any game which you propose.
I will not let my eyelids close.
I'll just lie down, my precious one,
Until you get the dishes done."

My lady shakes her lovely head,
Almost as if she doubted me.
A sneer, I fancy, I can see.
The next I hear is: "Time for bed!
Our interesting hours have fled.
You've slept this happy evening through.
As I predicted you would do."

Another Letter From a Bald-Headed Dad to His Flapper Daughter.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

MY DEAR LOUISE:

I dont pretend to know anything about your sex of this generation. In fact, I don't pretend to know anything about your sex of any generation. But I do know a few things about my own, and I want you to lend a respectful ear and believe what I say.

Numbers of men—doctors and various kinds of 'ologists—have made a reputation in the last few years by defending the "single standard of sex morality."

Their argument, in brief, is that people are animals and therefore should copy the sex promiscuity of pigs; that young women have a right to be unchaste because many young men are—as though two wrongs could make right; and, finally, that broad-minded modern males neither expect nor require chastity in the girls they select as wives.

It is cunning propaganda, but it is prompted by the father of lies.

My sex isn't wholly rotten. There are many manly young men who have no experience of women; many who never have kissed a girl; many, of the outdoor, he-man type, who think they despise girls—until they meet the right one.

But these are not the only ones who expect untarnished brides. The worst of libertines is still a jealous male. Every normal man, regardless of his own past, demands the right to be first in his wife's experience.

That is illogical and unfair, but it is male nature.

Don't let the propagandists fool you. Men expect their women to be clean.

A youngster who has had much experience with girls may "try" every new one he meets, but he will take few chances. Unless he is drunk or completely rotten, he will go no further than a girl's apparent willingness invites him to go.

If there is "petting" or "necking," the girl is to blame. Her standards are the ones that determine what a boy may do.

Sex is a girl's capital. It is a capital she can't rebuild. Every favor she gives away leaves her that much poorer and by so much lessens her value in the eyes of men. When she has nothing left to give, she is bankrupt and worthless.

What is more, she is despised—now as ever—by the one who takes away her value and by the other rotters to whom he tells the story of his conquest.

The ways of your sex may have changed, my dear, but men still kiss and tell and still value most things they can't get.

Love,
DAD.

PRO AND CON

Tax Logic.

Kansas City Times.

The time for taxpayers to assert themselves is when expenditures involving heavy subsequent taxes are under consideration. If they do not exert themselves before the commitments are made, they can not consistently proclaim injustice when the taxes to meet them must be levied. The extravagance of Congress, combined with the shrinkage of revenues due to depression, has created a situation in which the rich alone can not be relied upon to meet the emergency. Some of the burden must be passed along to the general public, which shares in responsibility for the extravagance. And it will be so passed along, whether the levies are called sales taxes, excise taxes, stamp taxes or something else.

Should Go Deeper.

Kansas City Star.

"If," says one of the candidates for governor of Illinois, "we are going to be influenced by buncombe and swayed by prejudice at a time like this, when sober thought and wise decisions are necessary, I dislike to think what will come of it." A similar dislike is shared pretty widely in campaign years. Yet it often is not decisively operative at primary and election times, making inevitable the conclusion that the dislike is not so thoroughly ingrained as it ought to be.

Casualty of War.

Chicago Tribune.

It's just too bad what they're doing to Speaker Garner's boom down in Congress. The Democrats and Republicans have joined together and are running wild all over the place, and Mr. Garner's boom—well, just look at the darned thing now.

Radical Blindness.

Brooklyn Citizen.

The substitute plan proposed by Mr. La Guardia for the general sales tax, according to Secretary of the Treasury Mills, would fall far short of raising sufficient revenue to balance the budget. All of the substitute measures favored by the radical group are based on the popular slogan, "soak the rich." These people ignore the fact that wealth produces industry and industry gives employment. There is such a thing as the flight of capital. This generation has witnessed it in Germany and it will witness it in this country as tax burdens become unbearable.

Inconsistent.

Chicago Tribune.

It is a curious fact that the same congressmen who rant most against the so-called money power, by which they mean the most powerful banking groups, are the same congressmen who are determined through the higher estate taxes to throw an increasing number of business ventures into the hands of these same bankers.

Puzzling.

Macon Telegraph.

How does a city that hasn't money enough to furnish a gal school teacher a new lipstick manage to put up $350,000 for two public riots otherwise known as national political conventions?

Word of Warning.

Boston Transcript.

There is need of an awakening in Washington to the value of sober second thought. Otherwise there would seem to be an excellent opportunity that a misguided Congress will hurl the country from present ills to ills it knows not of.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Safety Zones and Speed Problems Discussed by Pedestrian.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Isn't it about time for something to be done to stop the wholesale slaughter of pedestrians by automobile drivers? Take the safety zone problem here in Washington for instance. These so-called safety zones are certainly death traps. A person crossing the street is sufficiently in danger of being killed without stopping in the midst of traffic on a place that is marked off only by a white line. The platforms are not much better; people have been killed while standing on them.

There is only one remedy for making these zones really places of safety and that is to inclose them with iron posts strong enough and high enough for the purpose. This arrangement is used in other cities—Detroit, for one—and with success. The posts should be painted a bright color, well lighted at night and traffic should be directed to the right and behind them.

Now a crowd of morons will rise up and shout that these iron posts have been tried in Washington and that they were a menace to drivers. Well, of course, they were a menace to drivers, and that was a good reason for having them there.

There should be a uniform speed limit here in Washington of 25 miles per hour. This idea of having a 22-mile limit and a 30-mile limit would seem to be all right for people with a little horse sense, but it doesn't work in practice. Most of those who drive do about 30 in the 22-mile zones, when they can get away with it, and from 35 up in the 30-mile zones. Speed may be all right out in the country, but in the city it should be regulated and must be decreased if accidents are to be reduced to a minimum. When the average car is driven over 25 miles an hour it is not in control. But we must have some specified limit which can be enforced.

In order to enforce any speed limit that we now have or that might be made it will be necessary to dress policemen in civilian clothing so that they can not be spotted blocks away by the speeders. This is so obvious that it is hard to see how any valid argument can be made against it, and yet some folks arise in wrath every time such an idea is mentioned.

Another thing that would help in enforcing traffic regulations would be to revoke driving licenses for persistent infringement of the law. The license to drive is given by the people to a person who, in accepting the license, agrees to obey the traffic regulations. When he refuses to do this, he should have his license revoked. When a person is exceeding the speed limit to any considerable extent it is not through inadvertence. He must know it. And if he doesn't he is not a fit person to drive.

Cathedral Choir and Sanctuary to Be Opened on May 5—Work on Edifice Progressing Steadily.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The people of the Capital will rejoice with the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, in the news that the choir and sanctuary of Washington Cathedral are to be opened for public worship on Ascension Day, May 5. They have watched with interest the steady development of the great edifice on the crest of Mount Saint Alban, which will forever compose a part of the Federal City of which the founders dreamed. Like George Washington and Thomas Jefferson, the people agree with the thought of the original Capital architect, Maj. Pierre Charles L'Enfant, that there should be such "a church for national purposes" at the seat of Government.

The people of the city have felt that the Cathedral is their own. They have contributed to the funds required for its construction and decoration. They have attended its impressive services on national occasions. Without regard to the limitations of class or creed, they have accepted the Cathedral as a votive offering of all mankind.

Through nearly a quarter of a century the building of the church has gone on. Now at last approximately one-third of the work has been completed and is ready for service. There are many now living who will see the structure completed in all its loveliness and grandeur.

Bishop Freeman deserves congratulation for his courageous insistence that the labor should continue in times of depression. Those who generously have aided him in this respect are entitled to special thanks. They have kept a large group of craftsmen employed who otherwise would have been dismissed to join the army of the workless and distressed.

The first sacred service in the finished choir will be a memorable occasion, never to be forgotten by those who attend.

Mrs. Russell Calls for Enforcement of Ordinances Against Litter.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am glad to see a protest finally started by a correspondent against Washington's disgracefully dirty streets, sidewalks and vacant lots.

They present in all sections of the city a disgusting spectacle of scattered refuse, litter, tin cans and flying papers carelessly dropped by slovenly individuals and blown to the four winds.

There are ordinances against the scattering of papers and trash. Speaking of law enforcement, why would not these be good laws to enforce?

Unless some very drastic action, in which all authorities cooperate, is taken and taken soon to clean up the District and keep it clean, we shall present as a city about the same sort of spectacle that a family would present if they moved into a $1,000,000 marble mansion and kept house in it as if it were a pig-sty.

MRS. CHARLES EDWARD RUSSELL.

WOMAN, ILL, ENDS LIFE BY DROWNING

Marjorie C. Vandyne, 32, of Chevy Chase, Dies in Pool Near Sanitarium.

A certificate of death by suicide was issued yesterday in the death of Miss Marjorie C. Van Dyne, 32 years old, of 12 West Kirke street, Chevy Chase, Md., whose body was found in a shallow pool near Washington Sanitarium and Hospital, Takoma Park, Md., by searching parties from the sanitarium, where she had been a patient for about two months. The certificate was issued by Dr. D. H. Kress, of the sanitarium.

When Miss Katherine Long, her nurse, left Miss Van Dyne's room on the first floor of the sanitarium yesterday morning about 5 o'clock on an errand, the young woman left the building clad only in pajamas and a coat. Miss Long spread the alarm a few minutes later, and searching parties were sent out. The young woman was found in Sligo Creek, lying face downward, near Carroll Avenue Bridge. She was pronouced dead from drowning by Dr. D. E. Davenport, acting superintendent of the sanitarium. Montgomery County Policeman J. E. Shoemaker, of the Takoma Park Substation, investigated the drowning and expressed himself as satisfied with the findings of the two doctors.

Miss Van Dyne was the daughter of Mrs. Frederick Van Dyne, of the Kirke street address. For several years she has been a teacher at the John Eaton School in Washington, but did not return to her duties this fall because of ill health. She had been under treatment for several months for nervous disorder.

She was a daughter of the late Frederick Van Dyne, long prominent in the U. S. Consular Service, who disappeared from the steamship Santa Anna on April 21, 1915, when the ship was one day out from New York. He had been Assistant Solicitor of the State Department and in 1907 was appointed consul to Kingston, Jamaica. He again was Assistant Solicitor in 1910, and in 1912 served as technical delegate on the commission of jurists at Rio de Janeiro. He was consul at Lyon, France, in 1913, and February 5, 1915, was appointed consul at Naples, Italy. It was believed that he jumped overboard, his action being blamed on a nervous condition resultant from worries over the World War.

Miss Van Dyne is survived by her mother, three sisters, Miss Frances Van Dyne and Miss Esther Van Dyne, teachers at a mission school in Algeria, and Mrs. Bryan Brown, of Virginia, and a brother, Frederick Van Dyne, also in consular service. She was the youngest child. Funeral services had not been completed last night.

BONUS BILL LOOMING IN TROUBLED HOUSE

A great many Democrats who violently disagree with him, but that doesn't daunt Patman.

Patman is always being asked to address veterans' gatherings, and great is the cheering when he tells how the bonus bill will help the veteran and at the same time help the country.

As a physical evidence of the sentiment for the bonus, Patman has a petition signed by nearly 5,000,000 persons, and this will be presented to the House ways and means committee when the hearings on the measure start.

Continued Its Fight.

Mr. Patman was in Detroit when the American Legion was preparing to take a stand on the bonus question. He was confident that the legion would ask that the certificates be paid in full. When the legion, after hearing a plea from President Hoover, voted down the cash payment plan, Mr. Patman took the position that the convention did not truly reflect the feeling among the rank and file of veterans, and he thereupon announced that he would continue his fight.

In the beginning Mr. Patman's plan was to suggest a Federal bond issue to raise the $2,200,000,000 or more that would be needed to pay off the veterans the full value of their certificates. Now, however, he has abandoned that idea in favor of another one.

He would simply have the Bureau of Engraving and Printing turn out $2,200,000,000 in additional paper money.

"Yes, but what would be behind that paper?" Mr. Patman was asked.

Mr. Patman pulled out a table on which were listed the various issues of currency. He pointed to a line which stated that there was outstanding $1,674,580,839 in Treasury gold certificates.

40 Per Cent Backing.

"Those certificates," Patman explained, "are backed dollar for dollar by gold. In my opinion, that is not necessary. Instead of having a 100 per cent security in bullion, why not have only 40 per cent? If we reduced the ratio that much, we could issue enough new money to pay the bonus.

"It wouldn't affect the credit of the United States. What it would do would be to help the needy veterans and their families, and, by putting more money into circulation, cause an increase in commodity prices. A rising market means a return of prosperity."

All that might sound like strange economics to President Hoover and Secretary of the Treasury Ogden Mills, but it sounds mighty good to the veterans, a fact that will be made manifest whenever their representatives get a chance to vote in the House.

Izetta Jewell Faces Jail In Court Contempt Case

Former Capital Actress Accused in Welfare Bureau Dispute.

At a hearing as to why she should not be held in contempt of court, Mrs. Izetta Jewell Brown Miller, former Washington actress, and now head of the Welfare Bureau in Schenectady, N. Y., was yesterday threatened with a possible jail term, according to an Associated Press dispatch from Schenectady.

Mrs. Miller, who is the wife of Hugh Miller, professor of civil engineering at Union University and former dean of the College of Engineering at George Washington University, is charged with having failed to reinstate a woman worker in the welfare bureau as ordered by State Supreme Court Justice Christopher J. Heffernan.

When the justice was told that the Welfare Board was to hold a hearing on the charges upon which the worker, Miss Frances Rexford, had been removed, he said, "If Mrs. Miller or any one else attempts to hold such a hearing she will go to jail."

The widow of Representative William G. Brown, of West Virginia, Mrs. Miller was a candidate for the Senate from that State and was later a candidate to the House from New York.

Treasury, a subject of controversy between District and Federal Government later, inasmuch as the latter would not allow the local government to spend it.

"Congress, by the act of February 21, 1925, did recognize the existence of the $5,257,000, admitted that it belonged to the District, and it was appropriated," Maj. Donovan said.

"From that period on, from 1923 down to the present time, the District has lived entirely within its revenues with the exception of the fiscal years 1931 and 1932, in which years we will exceed our current revenue, but our surplus will take care of the excess."

He told the House committee that for the two years—1931 and 1932—the District's appropriation charges exceeded current revenues by $7,600,000.

"For 1933 the estimated revenues, including the $9,500,000, which we have assumed as the contribution by the United States, amount to $41,727,000, and the budget and other charges ammount to $41,727,000," he said.

"In other words, we have a balanced budget for 1933, provided you give us $9,500,000, as the contribution of the United States."

Mapes Report New Factor.

The subcommittee, it has been several times pointed out, considers itself instructed by House action in adopting the Mapes fiscal relation report to fix the Federal lump sum at $6,500,000. The House proposes that this $3,000,000 discrepancy be more than made up by the Mapes tax program, which, it is estimated, will yield $4,000,000 in additional revenues.

After Maj. Donovan had disclosed the prospective deficit at the District appropriation committee hearings, Chairman Cannon asked him how he accounted for it—was it due to decrease in revenues or increased expenditures?

"The Commissioners had in mind the fact, in preparing the budget for 1931 and also the budget for 1932, that we had accumulated quite a large amount of surplus revenues," Maj. Donovan replied.

"Mr. Simmons' committee a couple of years ago told the Commissioners they ought to submit estimates of appropriations to use up those revenues. So, in considering the budget totals for 1931 and 1932 the Commissioners took into consideration the fact that we had these surplus revenues and built the budget up accordingly."

Simmons' Stand Explained.

"You do not mean to say the committee suggested that you had the money in order to spend it?" Chairman Cannon asked.

"Yes, indeed," replied Maj. Donovan. "That came about as a result of the position taken by Mr. Simmons, the chairman of the subcommittee at that time. As the result of the position he took in the matter we obtained additional appropriations of $1,700,000 over and above what was submitted in the original estimates. Mr. Simmons thought we should not permit the accumulation of large surplus revenues. He believed appropriations should be made to use up this surplus."

Representative Robert G. Simmons (Republican), Nebraska, former chairman of the appropriations subcommittee, and now ranking minority member, made a statement explaining "the way in which that situation was brought about."

"In that particular year which the auditor speaks about," he said, "the school board had gotten upon its usual dignity and submitted estimates to the Commissioners, and the then Board of Commissioners, not the present board, desired to eliminate some parts of the budget and asked the school board to suggest other expenditures in lieu of those that they had taken out.

"The school board informed the Commissioners that they had submitted their recommendations for expenditures and had nothing further to offer.

"The result was that the Commissioners submitted it to the budget in that way. The budget officials in turn called upon the Commissioners and the school board to submit supplemental estimates, after having eliminated still further items in the budget, and the school board again submitted a statement that they had stated all their needs and had nothing further to offer.

Supplemental Budget Estimates.

"This budget estimate came to us with potential revenues of about $3,000,000 above the expenditures for the current year, due largely to the fact that the school officials are trying to create a situation whereby they could do what they still insist they ought to have the right to do; that is, to have their requests for funds come direct to this committee untouched by either the Commissioners or the Bureau of the Budget.

"As a result of that situation and the hearings we had and a conference that this subcommittee had with the then director of the budget, General Lord, we got supplemental budget estimates for one million, seven hundred thousand and some odd dollars for the building of school houses, for the building of an additional building at the Zoo, and a number of needed improvements of that kind.

"I submit that that is good economy; either we ought to spend the revenues of the District economically, or we ought to reduce the tax burden on the people of the District. There was no justification for carrying the tax burden and not spending the money.

"But that situation developed that year and became acute, as the result of a disagreement on the matter of policy between the school board and the Commissioners."

Moses Declares Congress Will Sit Until September

(United Press.)

Senator George Moses (Republican), New Hampshire, told President Hoover yesterday that he was convinced Congress would not adjourn finally until September.

The gray-haired senator, known for his incisive New England wit, said that he made the forecast "as long ago as last November." He feels now that the actions of the Democrats indicate they will force Congress to sit through the summer, with a recess for the national conventions at Chicago.

"I think a laurel wreath as a prophet should crown my brow," Moses commented, on leaving the White House. "The Democrats intend to make us sit all summer.

"They will do this as a political move. They know who our candidate is going to be now, and have more than two months to criticize us and him before we can know who they are going to run.

"The Democrats will use the gallery on Capitol Hill as a springboard for their criticism during the summer. Then, in September, when the people have returned to such jobs as they have, they will go home and make their direct campaigns."

Moses said another reason he felt Congress could not get through until September was that all the major appropriation bills, the tax bill, Muscle Shoals and the Philippine independence questions were yet to be acted on.

ALEXANDRIA TO AID TEMPLE DEDICATION

Council Assists Completion of Plans for Washington Masonic Ceremonies.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU,
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

Dr. Robert South Barrett, chairman of the committee on arrangements, and Charles H. Callahan, of the George Washington National Masonic Memorial Temple committee, appeared before an informal meeting of the city council Thursday evening and asked the cooperation of that body in the dedication ceremony to be held on May 12.

Mayor E. P. Ticer assured them every assistance will be given by the city, and suggested a conference with the local Bicentennial committee.

President Hoover, many members of his cabinet and 150 representatives and senators thus far have accepted invitations to attend. Council was asked to erect a reviewing stand for the President, to be 90 feet long and 20 feet wide. Also permission was requested for various women's organizations to feed the people on the grounds. There will be approximately 30,000 in line, and he plans to have box lunches prepared. He also asked permission to sell the official program book on the streets.

Dr. Barrett stated that 50 marines will handle the crowd at the Temple, and council was asked to provide additional policemen for the occasion.

The route of the parade, as announced, will be from Prince and Washington streets, east on Prince to Royal, north on Royal to King and west on King to the Temple. Charles H. Callahan is preparing historical maps for the visitors, also a booklet containing 50 pages, giving the history of Alexandria, Fairfax and Arlington Counties, to be ready soon for publication.

Victim of Holdup Trapped by Ruse

Motorist Says Two Women Were in Car Used by Robber.

Thomas Timmons, 24 years old, a salesman for J. S. Blackwell & Sons, 127 North Fairfax street, came into Alexandria yesterday morning and reported to police that early in the night while in Prince William County, near Dumfries, he stopped his car in response to a signal by a man who was standing by an automobile with two women in it.

The stranger asked Mr. Timmons to take him down the road to a garage, stating something was wrong with his car. After going a short distance Mr. Timmons states the man drew a gun and ordered him to drive on, keeping the pistol at his side until they passed Fredericksburg, when he was robbed of his wallet containing collections he had made.

The robber then made him drive on as far as Ashland, in the meantime the car with the two women following, and Mr. Timmons then was ordered to turn about and drive back without causing any outcry. The man then transferred to the car with the women, which bore Pennsylvania license plates, and followed Mr. Timmons back to a point near Spottsylvania Courthouse.

America Is Not "Blue," Rabbi Simon Declares

The "Blues" song does not typify nor is it congruent with the conquering spirit of America, Rabbi Abram Simon said last night in his address at the Washington Hebrew Congregation.

He stated that it was unfortunate that such manner of song was so prevalent when optimism is the watchword. The subject of his sermon was "Is Life Worth Living?"

Curiosity as to to how the world would progress in science, art and ways of living was stressed as one urge for living.

Dump in Arlington Yields Baby's Body

Coroner Theorizes Exposure Caused Death of Infant Victim.

The finding yesterday afternoon of the body of a baby by Arlington County Policeman Ernest Miller on the edge of the dump off the Military road near the tracks of the Arlington-Fairfax Railway, was reported to Coroner Dr. B. H. Swain.

Dr. Swain, after an examination of the body, said death was due to possible exposure and that in his opinion the child had not been dead more than three days.

The body, bearing no signs of identification, was removed by Dr. Swain to the undertaking parlors of C. J. Ives, at Clarendon, for burial. County police, under direction of Sheriff Howard B. Fields, are investigating.

HYATTSVILLE WARD CHANGES ORDERED

Action to Make 4 Divisions of Equal Size Is Taken by Town Council.

To remove the disparity in size among the four wards in Hyattsville, changes to be effective before the next election, have been ordered by the town council at a special meeting.

Names of those living in the affected areas will be changed to the registration books of their new wards before the first registration on April 11. Before they can vote, however, they must sign the books in the ward to which they are moved. This can be done on either April 11 or 18, or at the time of the election.

It is estimated that the change will cut the vote in the Third Ward from 572 to about 302, and will raise the Second Ward to 405 and the Fourth to 293. Total registration of the town is 1,279. The First Ward's vote of 259 will not be changed, as the change in its boundary is only technical.

The Fourth Ward will be enlarged to take in the territory bounded by a line beginning at the Colesville road, extending south on Calvert street to Arundel avenue, along Arundel avenue to Oakwood road, along Oakwood road to Columbia avenue, along Columbia avenue to the town line, along the town line to University drive, along University drive to the Colesville road and along the Colesville road to Calvert street.

The Second Ward will be increased by the addition of territory lying within a line along Spencer street, beginning at Maryland avenue, to Wine avenue, along Wine avenue to Owens avenue, along Owens avenue to Columbia avenue, and along Columbia avenue to the western boundary of the town. The First Ward will be designated as being "south and east" of Rhode Island avenue. Formerly the dividing line was the railroad, but there are no houses between the street and the railroad, which are roughly parallel, so no change in voting strength is involved.

Two Kensington Women To Get New York Estate

Under the terms of the will of Mrs. Katherine V. Steers, who died February 21, at her home in Schenectady, N. Y., Mrs. Lucia Stafford, a daughter, and Helen W. Fenwick, a granddaughter, both residents of Kensington, Md., will receive the residuary thousand dollars.

Terms of the will provide that the executrix will receive household furniture effects and a house in Schenectady, and two building lots in that city. The remainder of the estate consisting of more than $1,000 and some property will be divided between the two women. Doris M. Lamprey, of Schenectady another granddaughter, also received a testamentary letter.

ARLINGTON OFFICIAL URGES TAX PAYMENT

County Treasurer Initiates Move to Avoid Making Loans for Expenses.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 900. Clarendon, Va.

Efforts to collect delinquent real estate taxes in Arlington County were initiated yesterday by County Treasurer Charles T. Jesse to avoid negotiating further loans pending completion of the State's audit of former County Treasurer E. Wade Ball's accounts.

Mr. Jesse points out that the county has already found it necessary to borrow $140,000, of which $100,000 was to meet expenses, while the remaining $40,000 was for the county school board.

The step taken by Treasurer Jesse was in the form of a letter sent to all persons owing taxes. It reads as follows:

"It is most essential for prompt and efficient management of the financial affairs of the county that the taxes for the support of its activities be promptly and fully collected. Unless these taxes are paid immediately the county may be required to borrow money to keep the public schools open and to operate its other affairs.

"All taxes are past due. The addition of 5 per cent penalty on December 6 last did not extend the time for payment, but, on the contrary, the law imposes upon the treasurer the duty of forthwith collecting the taxes. The treasurer is clothed with ample authority and power to make these collections when they are not voluntarily paid.

"I sincerely hope I may have your full cooperation. Any of the remedies provided by law to force the collection of taxes will entail expense which will have to be borne by you."

How to Be Beautiful

Expert Answers Questions of General Interest

JUST NANCY: Many girls and women complain of the thinness of their thighs. The thighs should meet closely together and if they do not, an unlovely space results. Exercise and massage will help to develop the thighs. Running in place is a good exercise. This bicycle exercise and squatting is also good. My bulletin "beautiful legs" is yours for a self-addressed, stamped envelope. At night, after exercising, take a warm bath and after the bath massage with a cream made of equal parts of lanolin, cocoa butter and pure olive oil. Also, Nancy, you are generally underweight. Send for my weight gaining leaflet.

G. M.: A dash of cold water every morning makes a good tonic for the eyes. If this should prove the least bit irritating, add a wee pinch of salt. I have a new bulletin on eyes which outlines care and cosmetics for eye beauty.

* * * *

Lillian: A liquid cleanser is excellent for the oily type of skin. Be sure to go over face and neck several times with pad of cotton dipped into the liquid. Continue the cleansing until no soil shows on the cotton. For your lips, since they chap very readily, use a little soothing cream before applying the lip rouge. Be sure that your lipstick is a soft consistency as the hard type requires rubbing to leave an impression and this will hurt the delicate tissues. Avoid moistening the lips or biting them. If you do not use lipstick there are many lovely colorless pomades that help keep the lips soft and smooth. Also treat the lips to a little creaming at night before retiring.

F. R. J.: It is a groundless superstition that every strand of hair should grow to exactly the same length, otherwise it is unhealthy. It is quite natural, normal and healthy for hair to grow to different lengths and the fact that you need frequent hair cuts in order to keep the hair in "trim" merely implicates that your hair is growing rapidly. Continue to brush and massage it. You seem to be giving it excellent care.

* * * *

K. C.: I want to congratulate you on your wisdom. Young girls should not wear very bright nail polishes, particularly to office or school. The flesh shade you mention is fine for daytime wear. And you can occasionally treat yourself to a deeper coral for an afternoon party and even try a cardinal shade for an evening dance. It is quite the vogue to vary the nail polish shades to suit the occasion.

G. G.: There is a white brilliantine which may be used on gray hair that remains dull in spite of brushing. Use just a little on palms of the hands and stroke the hair, or spray sparingly with atomizer.

Advice on Gardening

By JANE LESLIE KIFT

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES.

PLEASE tell me where to get a Christmas rose?

MRS. HENRY F. H.

I am sorry, but we can not publish names or places in this column. If you care to write again, inclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope, I shall be glad to tell you of several firms listing the Christmas rose.

What is the remedy for a flat, shell-shaped, fungus-like growth appearing 6 or 8 inches up the branches of my lilac bushes? Will this damage the plant? MRS. HORACE W.

Common lilacs are generally subject to San Jose and oyster shell scale, which may completely cover the branches. When the infestation is severe, it is sometimes wise to cut down the bushes, but where only a few branches are affected, you will find spraying before growth starts most effective. The spray to use is known as lime-sulphur. This is not a patent preparation and can be purchased in any seed store.

I have a large blue hydrangea bush which last year was not pruned, but which bloomed most profusely. When should I prune the bush?

MISS EVA D. L.

The French hybrid hydrangeas bloom on wood made the previous year, so it is really unwise ever to cut them down. Of course, when they have outgrown their quarters this is sometimes necessary. In such a case prune them in the early spring and expect no flowers until another year.

I have some verbena seed. Can this be planted in a window box or will it do better in the open border?

MISS SARA B.

If the verbenas have plenty of sun, they should do well in either location. In a window box they will require more careful watering.

Please tell me the summer care of an oleander. HELEN B.

Keep plant on a sunny spot on your porch and water it every day. About this time it would be well to incorporate some bonemeal with the soil in which it is growing. This can be done without disturbing the roots of the plant. If it is easier, use liquid manure.

Please tell me how many English ivy plants are used to start an ivy blanket on an adult grave. FRIEDA.

Usually eight small ones are used, two being planted at either end, placed so that the tendrils grow toward the center of the grave. The remaining four plants are planted 12 inches apart along the center of the grave. The long branches are pinned in position with bone or wire hairpins. As the plants grow and develop more tendrils or branches, pin these close to the ground. In this way you can train the vine to cover the soil.

Would maidenhair fern be likely to do well in a window box facing the north? It is in dense shade most of the time. EMILY L. H.

The maidenhair fern has too delicate a constitution for window box use. Better fill the box with low growing holly fern or begonias. These should do well in such a location.

Fifth Avenue Fashions

THE NEW "GIGOLETTE" DRESS.

One looks so well groomed in sports type clothes, it is little wonder they remain so popular.

Here is the newest idea of Paris. And don't you think it snappy? It has all the lines demanded by fashion. Added to this it has an unusually lovely neckline. It favors the raised waistline that you undoubtedly have heard so much about. And the bodice is given a smart double-breasted effect, so modish. The skirt is cut with gores that suggest length and slimness.

It's so strikingly youthful, and up to the minute.

For cruise wear, you couldn't ask for anything smarter than this lovely model fashioned of white sheer woolen of novelty weave and with it wear a beret of navy blue felt. Or you can make the skirt of white flannel and the bodice of navy blue sheer woolen or rough finished crepe silk.

For the college girl, for high school miss and for youthful women types, this model is most attractive in sheer woolen in light green coloring, that has a slight yellowish cast.

And it is the most simple dress to make. It takes but 3⅝ yards of 39-inch material for the 16-year size.

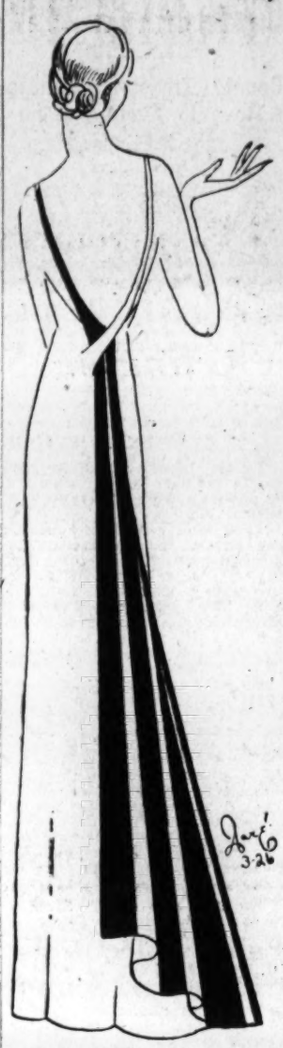
Interpreting the Mode

By DARE



NEW YORK, March 25.—Crepes, satins, laces, cottons, all are demanding prominence in the new evening collections. The problem confronting every lovely lady is just when to wear which. Well, now, let us consider. If you were going on a long trip and knew you would have many evening engagements, most certainly you would include one or two lace evening gowns. Why? Simply because you could take them out of your trunk the minute you arrived at your destination, hang them in the bathroom, turn on the hot water, close the bathroom door tight and leave them for a few minutes and presto, they are fresh and wrinkleless, ready for you to slip into and go forth as you would if your French maid at home were taking care of you.

Then suppose you were going to sojourn at some resort, where the warmth of the sun's rays lasted late into the evening. You surely would want one of the lovely new cotton frocks. Youthful and charming these new gowns, but please, please, keep in mind they must be cleaned and pressed every time they are worn.

This spring the crepe and satin gowns will be worn at the formal evening gathering, just as always, for nothing will ever replace their elegance.

* * * *

Color accents are more than often placed at the back this season. And just to show you how very effective they can be, cast your eyes at the illustration I have made for you today. This delightful gown, seen at a New York gathering, is in black crepe with the smart back panel in a soft rose red.

'Member the six-in-one dress I designed for you a few weeks ago? 'Member how it had several sets of sleeves? You probably have been puzzling ever since to know how to change these sleeves with the least possible effort. Well, your Dah-ray never lets you puzzle very long about anything, now does she? So, she ups and makes you a leaflet telling you how they make an underskirt and guimpe for the six-in-one dress and you attach the different sets of sleeves which accompany this delightful costume right to the guimpe. Now, could you ask more? You simply must sit right down and send a self-addressed and stamped envelope to the Dare Department, Washington Post, for the leaflet that tells you how, out of 2 yards of material, to make the undergarment for your six-in-one dress.

What Today Means

"ARIES."

IF MARCH 26 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:10 a. m. to 10:30 p. m., from 1:45 to 3 p. m., and from 7 p. m. to 8:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 11 a. m. to 12:45 p. m., and from 4:30 p. m. to 6 p. m.

The material side of life, the more active interests and pleasures and work in general, will not be particularly favored by the stars on March 26. It is an unusually good time for serious thought and study. Authors, research workers, those in church work, musicians and teachers, should find it an inspirational time.

The child born on this March 26 will have a winsome, loving nature, but will not have a forceful character. It will have a riotous imagination, considerable optimism, and will be a bunch of nervous energy. It will not try to excel in its school work, and will not express any special talents.

The uniformity of your disposition is one of the most pleasing things about your character. There are few inconsistencies in your make-up, and your faults and your virtues are exhibited alike to everybody. You do not change color to suit an occasion or to impress an audience. Nobody could be more unaffected and natural than you are, and you are indifferent as to what people think of you. The world is at liberty to accept or reject you as it pleases.

You are not content with small standards of living, and you mean to be something more than a cog in a wheel. You have an analytical mind and pick things to pieces until you understand the importance of the tiniest detail. Your profundity of knowledge about many things is sometimes boring to people who are satisfied to only seem to know things. You never assume interests or attitudes. You never waste a minute and your mind and hands are usually usefully occupied. You do not like knick-knacks and gewgaws about you and have little time for toys.

You like the thinkers and doers of the world, no matter what or who they are. You are not a social snob, and the only passport to your friendship is brains or character. Affairs of romance will play only a secondary part in your life.

Culbertson on Bridge

DECEPTION.

WELLINGTON is reputed to have said that the art of war is "in knowing what the enemy was doing over the hill." The art of strategy in Contract bidding is comparable to strategy in warfare. It is not only important to know what your adversary at the Bridge table is "doing over the hill," but if you would reach the best possible result it is important to conceal from him the disposition of your forces as well as their strength.

North—Dealer.

	♠ A Q 10 ♡ — ◇ A K Q 10 9 8 7 ♣ K 8 7
♠ J 9 8 3 2 ♡ K Q 10 9 ◇ 6 4 ♣ 6 5	N W E S	♠ K 7 6 5 4 ♡ 6 5 4 3 2 ◇ 2 ♣ 9 4
	♠ — ♡ A J 8 7 ◇ J 5 3 ♣ A Q J 10 3 2

The Bidding.

(Figures after bids in table refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

North	East	South	West
1◇ (1)	Pass	3♣ (2)	Pass
3♡ (3)	Pass	6♡ (4)	Dbl. (5)
7◇ (6)	Dbl. (7)	Redbl. (8)	Pass
Pass	Pass

1—The holder of the North hand was a firm believer in the Approach principle. Most players would be afraid to make a bid of one diamond with his holding and risk a pass by partner.

2—A correct Forcing Takeout. Although the hand contains only 2½ honor-tricks, it is rich in playing-tricks and can support diamonds if the suit is rebid, or hearts if partner holds a semi-two-suiter.

3—Laying a trap for the opponents at the risk of momentarily deceiving partner. A wholly unsound bid and a dangerous one, but the Forcing Takeout by South in clubs, for which North has adequate support, causes him to believe that he can escape from his bluff bid without loss.

4—A surprise for North. South takes the heart bid seriously.

5—West falls into the trap.

6—North is forced to bid either seven in a suit or six notrump. Uncertain as to the length of the club suit, he feels that it is safer to play the hand in seven diamonds than in seven clubs. He intends to bid seven notrump if partner returns to seven hearts.

7—East, influenced by his partner's Double of six hearts, believes he will conceal his partner's strength by doubling seven diamonds.

8—South now grasps that there is something wrong with the heart bid and, as his partner has rebid diamonds, decides not to take him back to that suit, but elects to play the contract redoubled, reasoning that if his partner holds any spades they can be ruffed with his diamonds, while West may hold five hearts, making a Grand Slam in hearts impossible.

The result, of course, is apparent. The hand produces a Grand Slam and, through the deceptive bidding of North, it was played at its redoubled value. I do not recommend North's strategy, as it is entirely too dangerous and too difficult for even an understanding partner to decode. There is not always the safe refuge of a Grand Slam bid in notrump.

TODAY'S POINTER.

While the art of successful bidding is based on giving partner enough information to encourage him to continue the bidding and to deceive opponents as much as possible as to distribution and honor strength, the bidding of suits not bid by opponents to show void is ordinarily a dangerous and losing practice. Its success in this instance was due to the factors of favorable distribution and overwhelming honor strength.

Radio Dial Flashes

By ROBERT D. HEINL

THE turn has been called by Capt. S. C. Hooper, director of naval communications, on stations throughout the country giving radio listeners "any old time" at any interval it best fits into an advertising period and calling it "Naval Observatory" time.

This came in the following letter which Capt. Hooper addressed to the Federal Radio Commission:

"It has come to the attention of the Navy Department that a number of broadcasting stations are transmitting time signals which they receive over a Western Union wire, and they announce them as originating from the Naval Observatory, Washington, D. C.

"The Navy Department has, in the past, upon application from a broadcasting station, authorized the rebroadcasting of time signals if the station intercepted the direct transmission of the signal from Washington.

"The rebroadcasting of Naval Observatory time signals which are transmitted over a land wire is objectionable because of the inherent time lag in the system which creates an appreciable error in the signal.

"Accordingly, it is requested that suitable instructions be incorporated in the Federal Radio Commission's rules and regulations for the guidance of broadcasting stations."

The American operatic composer, Deems Taylor, will describe the second and third acts of his own opera, "Peter Ibbetson," during the broadcast from the Metropolitan Opera House over WRC at 2:45 o'clock this afternoon.

"Peter Ibbetson," which is based on George du Maurier's famous novel of the same name, was first produced at the Metropolitan Opera House in February, 1931. Edward Johnson, tenor, singing the role of Peter Ibbetson, heads the cast which includes Lawrence Tibbett, barytone; Lucrezia Bori, soprano; Gladys Swarthout, contralto; Ina Bourskaya, contralto; Angelo Bada, tenor; Santa Bionda, soprano; Leon Rothier, bass, and Louis di Angelo, bass. Tullio Serafin will conduct.

WHAT Frederic William Wile describes as his greatest broadcasting thrill he got at Geneva recently when he put the League of Nations Assembly on the American air.

By dint of close figuring and good luck, he managed to switch the assembly on to the transatlantic short wave at the exact moment, almost to the second, that Dr. Yen launched his scathing indictment of Japan.

Practically every word of the Chinese Minister's 55-minute address was heard in the United States as it was being delivered to the assembly.

Mr. Wile will return to the American ether from the studios of Station WMAL tonight during the Public Affairs Institute, when he will discuss "America's Part in the Geneva Disarmament Conference."

THE Pan American Day concert played by the Army Band on the Ellipse on April 14 will be sent to Europe through a German station as well as to the Latin American countries via the short waves. The Pan American concerts are heard regularly in all the Latin American countries, but the continent has few opportunities to hear music indigenous to the southern republics. Some of this music became popular in Spain and Portugal, following the appearance of the United States Army Band at Madrid last year, but to the rest of Europe it is practically unknown.

Arrangements for the European end of the broadcast have been made by Kurt Sell, who represents the German broadcasting company here and whose bimonthly talks from Washington are distributed by the German broadcaster to 72 continental stations, to send the Latin-American music over the same European network.

Ray Perkinss, radio humorist, felt that since Rudy Vallee had been over to call on President Hoover, the only thing left for him to do the next day when he arrived in Washington was to visit Vice President Curtis. Anyway, Ray thought this was a good thing, because he had been made supervisor of vice presidents of the N. B. C. and saw an opportunity to compare notes.

Senator Robert F. Wagner will talk on "Pathways of Recovery" during the National Democratic Forum program, to be broadcast over WMAL at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon. Senator Wagner's talk will include the third National Democratic Forum series.

The NBC "Keys to Happiness" program observes its first birthday today * * * The total number of men, including railroad engineers and representatives of the broadcasting system, who have worked out the details of the train broadcast of the Gaities tomorrow night, exceeds 270 * * * Playing animal roles in "Moonshine and Honeysuckle," the Southern mountain serial drama, is a sideline interest to Bradley Barker, who is a motion picture production manager during the week * * * America will hear the Prince of Wales and other distinguished speakers at the opening of the new Shakespeare Memorial Theater at Stratford-on-Avon on Saturday, April 23 * * * Ruth Etting, stage and radio star, presented twice weekly on "Music That Satisfies," is capable as a dress designer, and she both designs and makes practically all of her clothes.

How to Keep Well

By DR. W. A. EVANS

HABITS FOR FAT PEOPLE.

DR. L. H. NEWBURGH thinks that obese people are fat because they kid themselves. They are very apt to try to kid other people and, above all, their physicians. Most of them lay the foundations in childhood. Encouraged by their mothers, they eat too much. The normal appetite of such children would have made them stop eating before they took too much, as is the way of the God given, normal appetite.

But mothers make the child's food too appealing. Presently the desire to eat more because it tastes good causes the child to disregard old man natural appetite, when he says to the child: "Stop eating. You have enough." Probably mother is somewhere nearby trying to induce her child to eat a little more because of her dread of undernourishment and her fear of its consequences.

Presently the child has acquired new food habits based on artificial lines. Now he eats for the pleasure of eating, or in order to get a feeling of fullness in the stomach. Being a child, with nothing else to do, he plays hard enough to burn up the surplus and no obesity appears to warn the parent that the new standards of eating are not based on the body's needs. Then, for one reason or another, the fires burn lower and the bins pile up with coal. That we call obesity.

Dr. Newburgh says there is but one way to cure obesity, and that is by dieting. Furthermore, the dieting must be continued until new eating habits are established. These new habits must be based on new appetites. Back of the dieting must lie new habits, and back of those new appetites, else the cure will not stick. Until the person has lost all desire to eat the quantities of food and of the quality he formerly consumed he will be in danger of going back to his old food habits, and when he does he will go back to his old fat.

Most fat people eat until they have a certain sense of fullness. This they call satisfying the appetite. This is a false standard, but the man who is thoroughly trained on that basis can lose weight if he will fill to that standard with cabbage and other foods of low caloric values. But eventually he must train himself away from that desire for the "fullness" feeling, if the cure is to stick.

* * * *

Fat people who tell you they are small eaters Dr. Newburgh finds to be the most consistent of all prevaricators. They often kid themselves, and they are most ingenious in kidding others. He has had indifferent success in reducing people of this class, unless he puts them in a hospital and can regulate the food intake with no possible breaks.

One woman insisted she ate no dinner, which was true, but she forgot to say she ate a half-pound of nuts and candy at her daily bridge game. A girl insisted she ate no breakfast and no lunch. When the facts were uncovered her menu was as follows: Breakfast—Banana, cereal, eggs, devil's food cake or butter cake, a glass of milk. She ate no lunch. She ate candy instead. At 3 p. m., having had no lunch, she ate some rolls or apple strudel and a glass of milk. Supper—Chicken soup, with rice, gefulte fish, carrots, celery, mashed potato, lettuce and tomatoes, bread and butter, apple sauce, a glass of milk and a dessert.

"SLUGGISH LIVER."

REPLY.

Sluggish liver generally means constipation. As a rule, when a person says he has such a liver he means he is constipated. There may be a condition that could properly be termed sluggish liver that is separate from constipation, but if so it has not been defined, and no one knows just what it is—if it is.

Wives of Tomorrow

FRANCES McDONALD

A Bragging Sheik.

DEAR Frances McDonald: I'm a constant reader of your column, and I think you're wonderful. That's why I'm writing to see what you think of my problem. I met a fellow about one year ago. He entertained me and treated me perfectly. I also met his folks, and they also were nice to me.

Now here is my problem. He told me he's been around a great deal. He has been engaged twice and has at different times supported three different girls. What do you think of him? Now he tells me he loves me and wants to marry me. But I haven't been around at all and I don't know what to think of it all. He's always been all right to me. I can't say anything against him.

I always said that I wanted a fellow who had been around, so that when he married he'd settle down. But will they settle down? Do you think that they can after being on the go all the time, and having had so many girls? Can they be satisfied with only one girl? DOUBTFUL.

We think you have met a bragging sheik who would like to be "engaged" once more to start the new year right. And he figures that you are about as credulous a soul as he is likely to meet and so it might just as well be you. As to what sort of husband a braggart of his dimension would make it would seem to us that you need hardly cross that bridge until you come to it. No doubt the other two girls to whom he was "engaged" wondered about that, too, but as things turned out they wasted whatever time they may have spent in speculation as to their future with him! Profit by their example. Do not take this irresistible woman-tamer too much at his own estimation. Personally we can not imagine what the remaining women on earth would do if he ever did decide to concentrate on any one. We are convinced it could not happen. Earthquakes, murders, fires and floods, yes, but nature would halt before permitting such world-wide calamity to womankind.

Dear child, you may crave a man who "has been around," but you can find one who is not still reeling. Most men have "been around"—plenty. But the better ones can go slumming without becoming slummy. And the best have something more to offer the one woman than a lurid tale of cheap conquests and betrayals. Take life slowly. You will never stop meeting men—good, bad and indifferent. If some poor superficial dilly-dallying sheik is all that you rate, you can always annex one on short notice. But it may just happen that if you give yourself a chance you may rate something a lot nearer to a real man. Is it not worth the chance? If you agree with us just laugh this wonder off, accept him for what he is, a most amusing type, see him if you care to study the species, but see him clearly and not through the rose-colored glasses he has pulled over your eyes. And to an experienced eye he appears pretty messy material—even for a sheik.

The Churches of Washington Invite You to Join With Them Easter Sunday in Commemoration of the Rise of The Savior

CATHOLIC MASSES WILL BE BRILLIANT

Special Interest Attaches to Franciscan Monastery and Shrine Services.

Easter is always celebrated with all the splendor and pomp of its age-old ritual by the Catholic Church, and in every Catholic church in Washington tomorrow the services will be brilliant. This is one day in the year when all Catholics assemble for worship, and many of their churches and cathedrals also draw non-Catholics who take a reverent interest in this service.

In some of the churches the masses will begin as early as 5:30 o'clock, but in most of them the usual sunrise hour of 6 a. m. is the beginning of the day's services.

Of peculiar interest and always attractive to thousands of Washingtonians are the services which will be held at the Franciscan Monastery at Brookland and at the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception at the Catholic University. In both the chief service is of rare beauty.

Resurrection service will begin at the monastery at 8 o'clock this evening, with masses tomorrow at 6, 7 and 8 o'clock, and solemn high mass at 9 a. m. At 3:30 in the afternoon will be the Compline and Solemn Benediction.

At Immaculate Conception.

DR. J. C. MASSEE.

SUCCESS ATTENDING REVIVAL OF MASSEE

Second Week Begins Tomorrow at National Baptist Church.

The first week of a three weeks' campaign for a revival of Bible Christianity, now under way at the National Baptist Memorial Church, came to a close Friday night with marked success. The second week is to be inaugurated tomorrow by Dr. J. C. Massee, world-famous preacher, speaking at 11 a. m. on the subject, "The Unchanging Christ," and at 8 p. m. on "Where Are the Dead—Shall We Know Each Other Beyond the Grave?"

Dr. Massee is being assisted in the meetings by the Rev. Arthur G. Slaght as soloist and song director. Mr. Slaght is accredited with the honor of having twice in the last three years been asked to lead the great Baptist convention in its musical program. He will be assisted at the organ by Mrs. Emily G. Dickinson and by the church choir in arranging special music.

Dr. Gove G. Johnson, the pastor, announced yesterday that Dr. Massee would preach this coming week on the following subjects, speaking each night at 7:45 and in the afternoon at 3 o'clock:

Evening topics:

Monday (Sunday school night)—"Walking Stick Religion."

Tuesday (every church officer—all men's organizations)—"From Darkness to Light—A Soldier Who Changed Flags."

Wednesday (family night)—"Back to Bethel." (One of Dr. Massee's books will be given free to every family where father, mother and three children are present).

Thursday (women's night)—"What Happens at Death? How It Feels to Die!"

Friday (young people's night)—"Is God Interested in Our Love Affairs?" An intriguing subject, wonderfully handled by Dr. Massee.

Tuesday—"Baptism in the Holy Spirit."

Wednesday—"Filling With the Holy Spirit."

Thursday—"Baptism in Fire."

Friday—"The Holy Spirit and Sanctification."

Climax With Pageant.

The climax of the celebration of the day will come in the presentation of the great Easter pageant, "Outside the City Wall," at the evening worship hour by a group of the talented young people of the church. The pageant, which has been written and directed by Mrs. Helen Turley, director of programs, deals with the evidences of the influence of Jesus on those whose lives He touched while He walked the earth, with His death on the cross, and the discovery of His resurrection by the women at the tomb.

The pageant is divided into eight episodes, with appropriate musical numbers interspersed. The episodes portray John the Baptist, who heralds the coming of the Messiah; the enlistment of the disciples; the little children whom Jesus befriended, the Pharisees and scribes who scorned Him as the friend of publicans and sinners; a crippled woman who has been healed by Him; Mary, the Magdalene; the crowd coming from the crucifixion; a meeting between the mother of Jesus and the mother of Judas; the desertion of Simon Peter after the seeming failure of the cause he had loved; a meeting of Joseph of Arimathea and Nicodemus after the burial of Jesus, and finally the discovery by the three Marys at the tomb that the stone has been rolled away and that the Christ has risen.

The leading parts will be taken as follows: John the Baptist, H. A. March; Mary, the mother of Jesus, Miss Janet Jackson; Mary, the Magdalene, Miss Helen Burton; the mother of Judas, Mrs. Emmy Lou Tooley; Simon Peter, Leo Tooley; Joseph of Arimathea, Walter Pagan; Nicodemus, Russell B. Ross.

ANTHOLOGY PLANNED BY NOTED WRITERS

Two Volumes Will Be Issued on Anglo-Ecclesiastical Literature.

An anthology of Anglo-ecclesiastical literature of the seventeenth century, which will probably consist of two volumes of from 180,000 to 200,000 words each, is being prepared under the direction of a group of prominent religious educators who have also raised funds in part for its publication. It is hoped that both volumes will be published by 1933, the centennial year of the Oxford movement.

Announcement of the plans for the anthology was made recently by the Right Rev. Philip M. Rhinelander, chairman of the committee in charge and warden of the College of Preachers at Washington Cathedral. The responsible editors of the anthology are Profs. Paul Elmer More, of Princeton University and F. Leslie Cross, of Oxford University.

The other members of the committee are: the Very Rev. H. E. W. Fosbroke, dean of the General Theological Seminary of New York; the Rev. Frank Gavin, professor of ecclesiastical history at the General Theological Seminary; the Very Rev. William P. Ladd, dean of the Berkeley Divinity School, New Haven, Conn.; the Very Rev. Henry B. Washburn, dean of the Episcopal Theological Seminary, Cambridge, Mass.; the Rev. W. Freeman Whitman, associate professor of ecclesiastical history, Nashotah House, Wis.; Prof. John M. S. Allison, of Yale University; Prof. Kenneth B. Murdock, of Harvard University and Prof. Robert K. Root, of Princeton University.

The proposed anthology will depict the character of the English Church during the period of readjustment after the Reformation. Selection will be made from the writings of the principal divines of that period from Hooker to Ken, including whole or abridged sermons, tracts, chapters of books, together with briefer extracts.

Christian Science Churches

"Reality" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The Golden Text is from Isaiah 64:4: "Since the beginning of the world men have not heard, nor perceived by the ear, neither hath the eye seen, O God, beside thee, what he hath prepared for him that waiteth for him."

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "And God saw everything that he had made, and, behold, it was very good." (Genesis 1:31.) The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science Text Book, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "The Scriptures imply that God is All-in-all. From this it follows that nothing possesses reality nor existence except the divine Mind and His ideas. Everything in God's universe expresses him. He fills all space, and it is impossible to conceive of such omnipresence and individuality except as infinite Spirit or Mind. Hence all is Spirit and spiritual.'" (page 331.)

The Bond Club, of Washington, will have J. Fred Essary, Washington correspondent of the Baltimore, Sun, as speaker at its next luncheon meeting at the Carlton Hotel next Wednesday afternoon at 1 o'clock.

President Issues Statement.

In announcing the meeting to club members yesterday, President Lawrence M. Proctor, of the organization, issued the following statement:

"Are you interested in the question of who will be President of the United States after the fourth day of next March? If so, don't miss the talk by Mr. Essary on the political campaign up to the present time, and some of its possibilities during the next seven and a half months.

"Mr. Essary is one of the outstanding newspapermen of the United States. He has covered politics for the Baltimore Sun over a period of 20 years. He began as a youngster in the Roosevelt era, and has since reported the big events in Wasnington during the Taft, Wilson, Harding, Coolidge and Hoover administrations.

"He went to Paris with Wilson for the Peace Conference, and he interpreted the Laval mission to Washington only a few months ago. He has traveled with every presidential candidate, except LaFollette, since his journeyings with Taft and Bryan in 1908 and he has reported every national convention since and including those of 1912 that made Wilson a candidate against Taft and Theodore Roosevelt.

"Mr. Essary is the only man who has been president of both the powerful National Press Club here in Washington, and the internationally famous Gridiron Club, where the so-called great of this and other nations are roasted by the Washington correspondents. He is an utterly fearless recorder of history in the making, his analysis of political developments are uncannily accurate, and he swings a pen as picturesque as it is powerful.

"Don't miss what Mr. Essary, as an insider, has to tell you about the coming conventions in Chicago, and the bitter battle to be fought at the polls next November."

This was a decrease of $67,875 from the month last year. Net railway operating income for the first two months of 1932 was $5,290,009, a recession of $788,122 from the corresponding period in 1931.

L. A. Miller, Toledo, president of Willys-Overland, is visiting W. J. Chown, general manager of the Mid-City Sales Co., Willys-Overland distributor in Washington and states this distributor has an outstanding record with the company—its operations being such as to make any manufacturer proud.

During the past several months, Mr. Miller visited many distributing centers of the country and 15 particularly impressed with the manner in which business methods have been improved. Waste and excessive overhead have been eliminated in merchandising organization. The same as has been done in manufacturing.

COLUMBIA

"TARZAN, THE APE MAN." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the Edgar Rice Burroughs story, adapted to the screen by Cyril Hume, with dialogue by Ivor Novello, featuring Johnny Weissmuller, Maureen O'Sullivan, Neil Hamilton and C. Aubrey Smith. Directed by W. S. Van Dyke. Previewed Monday midnight.

By NELSON B. BELL.

The skeleton of Edgar Rice Burroughs' bizarre story of the white boy reared by the apes of the African jungles and the strange love that sprang up between him and the daughter of an ivory prospector in search of the elephants' chosen valley of death is here preserved about as it was employed in the silent version of "Tarzan of the Apes," in which Elmo Lincoln and Enid Markey appeared fifteen years ago. With that, however, the resemblance ends.

In reviving this fanciful fiction as the basis of a thrilling screen narrative, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer have gone Nature one better in many of her most astonishing moods. Thus we have Johnny Weissmuller, the world famous aquatic star, a better fighter than any of the lions he slaughters with his hands without receiving a scratch in return; a better climber than the monkeys he outdistances through the treetops as a sort of Apollo-winged Alfred Codona, who would put the best of the circus aerialists to shame, and a faster and surer swimmer than any of the alligators that can't catch him to devour!

Not only that, but Tarzan at intervals unburdens himself of a blood-curdling jungle cry that, although it always sounds exactly the same, means one thing to the elephants, another to the simians and still something else to the hippos!

However, while Mr. Van Dyke, the director of "Trader Horn," who in this subject has greatly improved upon his "Trader Horn" technique as a genuine creative genius—possibly second only to the justly renowned Baron Munchausen—takes liberties now and again with our credulity, he never permits his eye to wander from sure-fire and infallible box office, as was remarked in these columns as long ago as last Wednesday morning.

There is a free-swinging romanticism, an utter disregard for authenticity and a pile-driver plunging home of story points in "Tarzan, the Ape Man" that place it squarely in the realm of imaginative melodrama, immune to all the saner bases of measurement. You will either enjoy it tremendously, as an unreal but exhilarating experience, or abhor it thoroughly as an horrendous and outlandish fake, depending upon the degree of seriousness with which you view it. One thing is certain, it will be difficult even for the most acute observer to detect precisely where the Africa rescued from the "Trader Horn" cutting room leaves off and Hollywood begins.

Johnny Weissmuller, in the title role, does a surprisingly fine job. His speeches are almost monosyllabic for the excellent reason that Tarzan could not speak any but his own jungle language of strange noises—a limitation that Weissmuller contrives to make both realistic and convincing. His physical equipment for the part is perfect and toward the end of the action there is a flash of his speed and skill in the water. Maureen O'Sullivan, as the English girl who succumbs to the weird fascination of Tarzan's untrammeled mode of living, gives by far the most engaging performance it has ever been my privilege to see her contribute to any picture. Neil Hamilton and C. Aubrey Smith are the adventurers in search of a fortune in ivory who demonstrate that even elephant guns are impotent against a lad who sleeps out in the open!

The climax of the picture occurs with Tarzan's rescue of Jane Parker from the pit of death where she is about to be torn to shreds by a huge gorilla to make a holiday for a tribe of pygmies. Here, ladies and gentlemen, is a scene a Nero might have enjoyed as a bit of after dinner diversion fit for any emperor skilled in the niceties of torture.

FOX

"CARELESS LADY." Fox picturization of the story, "Widow's Might," by Reita Lambert, adapted to the screen by Guy Bolton; featuring Joan Bennett and John Boles. Directed by Kenneth MacKenna. Reviewed Friday night by Don S. Reed.

There is so much satisfying entertainment on this week's bill at the Fox that any award of first honors would be an affront to every other portion of the program. However, since the screen fare is highly commendable for its comedy value it may be well to describe it first.

Kenneth MacKenna, who has had some springhtly comedy roles himself during his acting career, and who directs this picture, has overlooked no opportunity to make excellent use of the "gags" and comic situations made plausible by the course of the story. The dialogue sparkles with wit and an exceedingly fine group of players add to the humor of the piece with effective pantomime aiding the spoken word.

This is the type of story for Joan Bennett. It is light and frisky and this delightful blonde actress is perfectly at home as Sally Brown, the shy, small-town girl seeking "experience" in Paris. What happens to her after she assumes the name of "Mrs. Stephen Illington" furnishes the material for the story. As may be suspected she reaches the climax of the piece between the devil and the deep blue sea.

John Boles, as Stephen Illington, sings, hums and smiles his way pleasingly through the role of friend, disappointed lover and hero, with Weldon Heyburn and Fortunio Bonanova as the twin villains of the tale, the first in America and the second in Paris. They are not very villainous, however, for it's not that kind of a picture. Mina Gombell adds to the general gayety with some elegant advice to Sally just before she leaves for Paris. Josephine Hull scores another swell bit as "Aunt Cora" and is abetted by Martha Mattox (Aunt Bella) who, because she is deaf, gives the most amazing answers. Others in the big cast are James Kirkwood, Richard Tucker, Nora Lane, Raoul Roulian, Maude Turner Gordon, J. M. Kerrigan, James Todd and Howard Phillips.

Opening the stage performance, the George Washington University chorus of mixed voices scores heavily with three numbers, a love song; a rollicking gypsy melody and an Easter carol. The chorus work was smooth, nicely arranged and splendidly presented. Al Mitchell and the Fox orchestra worked with the singers in perfect unison.

The Fanchon & Marco "Stars of Yesterday" idea found Eva Tanguay once more garnering the major share of the applause, but with this cast of old-timers she was forced to the limit. Hank Brown, a master of ceremonies who must have started Roscoe Ates on his stuttering career, introduced singers and dancers galore, ranging from 18 to 80, and not one but received a great hand for a good number. The list includes Corinne, Dan Barrett, May Hoey, Burt Jerdan, Hi Tom Ward, Tom Kelly, Rice & Cady, Sylvia and Irene (the only youngsters), Cho Cho, George Harrison and his coeds, Freddie Ford and Alexander and Evelyn. Last night they proved themselves still the "stars of today."

"Speed in the Gay Nineties," a Mack Sennett comedy; a Mickey Mouse cartoon, "The Mad Dog," and an issue of Fox Movietone News completed as satisfying a program as has been offered in weeks.

METROPOLITAN

"EXPLORERS OF THE WORLD" Reapin Production summary of expeditions of Harold McCracken, Gene Lamb, James L. Clark, Lieut. Comdr. J. R. Stenhouse, Laurence M. Gould and Harold Noice, assembled and arranged by Herold Noice. Reviewed Friday evening by W. A. Whitney.

From the far-flung corners of the globe come the materials of "Explorers of the World," the current embellishment of the long line of worthy expeditionary motion pictures. The Arctic, Asia, Africa, the Antarctic and the headwaters of the Amazon are the locales in this educational offering, which sets a new standard for strictly descriptive travelogues.

In each of the six glorious adventures, briefly shown, there is a wealth of material worthy of expansion into feature-length, and so, if one might have desired more monkeys, or penguins, or elephant fighting, it must be kept in mind that the error, if any, is strictly that of omission, committed by sheer necessity.

Opening with the six principals assembled at the Explorers Club, Harold Noice introduces Harold McCracken, leader of the Siberian-Arctic Expedition, which will be long remembered for its discovery of Stone Age mummies on the islands of Bering Strait. The Arctic fauna of Kodiak grizzly bear, sea lions, seals and walrus then give way to Gen. Lamb's Photo-Scientific Expedition to Tibet, with a generous consideration of contiguous Oriental countries.

The cause of the Dark Continent is upheld by a photographic summary of James L. Clark's African Expedition, whose shots of the Victoria Falls are alone worth the admission price. Leaving the Equator and continuing southward, come the wastes of water and ice of the Antarctic, where the graceful albatross and majestic icebergs vie with the self-satisfied penguin for the major interest in Lieut. Comdr. J. R. Stenhouse's contribution. Still at the South Pole the fifth division treats of Laurence M. Gould's part in the Byrd Antarctic Expedition, which, aside from the aeronautical achievement of Admiral Byrd, has become famous for its discovery of coal at the South Pole, the claiming for the first time in recent years of land by right of discovery, and the finding of Amundsen's original notes on the discovery of the South Pole.

For the final portion of the picture, Mr. Noice described in vivid detail life and customs among the Tariano Indians at the headwaters of the Amazon. In the de luxe performances (two in the afternoon and two in the evening), Mr. Noice makes his bow to Washington audiences and adds much of pleasure and profit concerning his experiences in the Brazilian jungles. Mr. Noice's remarks are interpolated very effectively in the running of the picture.

With this multiplicity of animals, peoples and countries, "Explorers of the World" offer the finest travelogue yet presented. There is a little bit of everything, and not enough of any one thing to become boring, with the result that here is fascinating and, at times, thrilling travelogue which, while conventional in its individual parts, is in its entirety, distinctly novel.

Rounding out the bill are an amusing Bennie Rubin comedy, "The Perfect Suitor," and a release of the Paramount Sound News in which Senator Bingham gets a big hand for his championing the cause of 4 per cent beer.

RIALTO

"THE COHENS AND KELLYS IN HOLLYWOOD." Universal picturization of an original comedy, starring George Sidney and Charles Murray. Directed by John Francis Dillon. Reviewed Friday afternoon by J. F. Brady.

"The Cohens and Kellys in Hollywood" should certainly drive away a settled case of blues, if laughs will help, although this latest effort of these funny fellows is not quite so funny as some of the previous "riots" put over by this pair of comedians. This sixth in the series, while not a riot by any means, nevertheless, presents many funny situations that come naturally, and sufficiently often to place the picture in the category of good, wholesome comedy. It is one without the least taint of objectionable matter that can not help but please anyone who cares the least for a laugh. Mingled in with this "burlesque on Hollywood" is enough love romance to satisfy every dramatic requirement.

This new story is a burlesque on picture making in Hollywood and on the life of a filmland star—the rise and fall of first the Kellys and then the Cohens with the final reconciliation of the pair, after many battles over the social life and the love troubles of the children. It is the rehash of an old story idea, but so well constructed and put over that it makes for a good picture.

Both Murray, as Kelly, and Sidney, as Cohen, are just as capable in this new conglomeration of comedy "gags" as ever. In the material at hand they both put over their usual good work and are funny.

June Clyde, as Kitty Kelly, the girl who rose to stardom overnight and whose new life sent her sky-hitting with her social airs, almost runs away with the show for a good portion of the way in her portrayal of the "glorified" burlesque of a picture star.

Norman Foster, as the son of Cohen, playing opposite Kitty in the role of the struggling young pianist who finally wrote a theme song that went over so big it put his family where the Kellys had been and then brought about their fall, is excellent.

It all comes about back in the town of Hillsboro, where the Kellys run a lunchroom and the Cohens a picture house—back in the days of the silent film. Young Cohen sends Kitty's picture to Hollywood and Kitty is invited there for a test, and of course she clicks. Then the Kellys rise to fortune and fame; Kelly writes a two-line post card to Cohen and Cohen thinks it an invitation to visit. That gets them all in Hollywood, in a general mix-up, and when the days of the silent are dead, Kitty's voice fails to make good in the talkies and so the Kellys are out. Then the Cohens rise by virture of the success of young Cohen's theme song. Finally they fall and their butler rises. In old second-hand autos purchased for their return trip to Hillsboro they are once again reunited—by engine trouble.

"The Cohens and Kellys in Hollywood" will entertain you, as well as the additional features on the bill, which include an interesting Universal News, showing the inauguration of the "Stamp Out Want" campaign in New York and the burial of Briand; a good comedy, "In the Bag," with Slim Summerville; another picture of Oswald, "The Lucky Rabbit," and last, a fine picture of Babe Ruth in "Perfect Control."

PALACE

"ARE YOU LISTENING?" Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of J. P. McEvoy's story, starring William Haines, with Madge Evans. Directed by Harry Beaumont. Reviewed Friday evening by Dorothea Lewis.

They must be hoarding in Hollywood—good ideas, we mean. They've gone in for round-robin story telling here—you know—when "A" tells a chapter and stops at absolutely the worst possible moment only to have "B" go on to an even worse moment from which poor "C" must carry on.

There is, however, very apparently no hoarding of good actors, for some eight or ten names and personalities are wasted on this opus.

Bill Grimes is a writer of radio continuities, who has married himself a wife, to whom, for all his efforts, he seems to remain married although loving Laura, a broadcasting favorite. From this beginning, the story runs a course as jerky as its photography, with digressions of little or no significance concerning Laura's two blonde sisters, their rich and racy beaux, and wild, wet parties: amusing moments of radio's backstage and sound effect revelations, and numerous extraneous characters. Maybe they got the scenes mixed on the cutting room floor, but we'll never know.

In the last reel or so, the play suddenly picks up interest with a tense and exciting man-hunt via radio, pursuing fugitives from New York to Florida, but even that fades out into an ending that may surprise you by being better than you feared but not so good as you hoped.

In opportunity and achievement, this is far from being Bill Haines' picture. Strangely enough, he is rather silly and ineffective in the lighter scenes only to improve considerably when more serious demands are made upon him.

Karen Morley as the impossibly disagreeable, nagging wife, and plump little Joan Marsh, though a bit too tipsy when tipsy at all, walk off with honors here. Madge Evans meets her assignment sympathetically and competently. Wallace Ford grows more likeable with each appearance. John Miljan does much to pep up the closing scenes, and, count 'em, Anita Page, Jean Hersholt, Neil Hamilton and Lucien Littlefield fill in the sadly put upon cast.

Reaching the stage show, the Three Dancing Gobs and their familiar act are, by comparison, practically the best of the bill.

There is a startling and exciting Rhumba which begins brilliantly, but lasts so long, and goes so far that you'll wonder how Miss Vanessi's innocent little wriggles could have incurred police ire just about a year ago. And, ladies and gentlemen, there is a sadistic "Minnie the Moocher" mixup and purported dance that is not only amateurish; it is embarrassing. More's the pity, for its vocal background is not bad.

ABOUT THE SHOWSHOPS

With NELSON B. BELL

IT'S an ill wind that blows nobody good—just to put into words an idea it seems to me somebody ought to have expressed long ago!

I mean, the major studios' overanxiety to reduce the expense of studio maintenance is making this a banner year for the independent, or one-picture-at-a-time, producer.

They are flocking back into the field after a protracted period of quiescence dating back almost to the beginning of the talkies.

At first the principal difficulty was encountered in trying to acquire satisfactory sound equipment, which was priced high—very high. The increased cost of production put many of the little fellows out of business.

But now, with the big fellows cutting costs by making fewer pictures, the door is open to the small producer who can turn out a good picture. The importance of the independent in Hollywood is gradually becoming about what it was back in the days before shouts and murmurs became audible.

A few of the major independents are sufficiently in demand to be able to contract for the distribution of their pictures before they make them. Charles R. Rogers, former production head of the Pathe studios, for example, will make at least six pictures this year, all of which Paramount has agreed to buy and release under its trade-mark.

By reason of no long-term contracts or other continuing overhead expenses, the average independent producer can make his pictures for about half what it costs the big, year-'round chaps.

The boys are having their innings.

Of course, when Ernst Lubitsch's production for Paramount of "One Hour With You" is presented at the Earle Theater, beginning a week from today, with Maurice Chevalier starred and Jeanette MacDonald, Roland Young, Genevieve Tobin and Charlie Ruggles foremost in his support, you will recognize the piece as a musicalized version of "The Marriage Circle," one of the first of Herr Lubitsch's sophisticated continental comedies to catch the public fancy in a big way.

Save your pennies if you have to, but do not under any circumstances miss it!

With the list of available motion picture stars pretty thoroughly used up, Harry W. Crull, managing director of the Fox, is shifting his interest to the more popular of the radio acts.

With "Sisters of the Skillet" just off from a successful week on F street, Mr. Crull now has Col. Stoopnagle and Budd in the offing, both well known over the Columbia network.

Before the prevalence of the present well, but not favorably, known depression, the colonel was vice president of one of the best known brokerage firms in Buffalo, N. Y. He is the son of Horace F. Taylor, Buffalo business man and president of the Buffalo Chamber of Commerce.

Budd, who is Wilbur Budd Hulick, first saw the light of day at Asbury Park, N. J. Later we find him attending Georgetown University in this city, where he was a famous member of the glee club, played football and in due course graduated.

Both are known for their imitations. In fact the colonel was admonished to abate his imitation of the Coolidge voice during the last presidential campaign because too many people thought it was the former President actually speaking. He does equally well with the voice of Col. Lindbergh.

Budd, on the other hand, is best known for his imitations of Rudy Vallee, Seth Parker, Bing Crosby, Cab Calloway, Morton Downey and other favorites of the stage and the ether waves.

Just to keep Hardie Meakin of RKO-Keith's company, Eddy Gilmore, new welkin ringer for the Loew interests in the Capital, apprises me that his houses also are going in for multiplicity of showings today.

At the Columbia seven presentations of "Tarzan, the Ape Man," are on the schedule, beginning at 10 a. m., with the doors opening at 9:45.

Although not quite that bad, the Palace still will offer five de luxe performances, with the box office opening at 10:30.

Speaking of the Palace, Orangelo Ratto—Angie to you, and you, and you and maybe me—for many years the courteous and efficient house manager at Thirteenth and F, took one of his infrequent respites from official duties last week and drove up to Pittsburgh to see for himself whether his old sidekick Mike Cullen really has a theater up there or merely a shooting gallery.

From Signor Ratto's enthusiastic report upon his return Thursday morning, I gather that it is a theater!

Another foam-flecked courier dashes in with a bulletin to the effect that Gen. Pelham D. Glassford, superintendent of the Metropolitan Police Department, has indorsed the movement started by the Fox Theater to determine the outstanding deed performed by any Washington policeman in line of duty during the impending fortnight.

Mr. Crull has planned to honor the member of the force who performs the most meritorious deed by giving him, as a reward, a week's outing at Virginia Beach, Va., with all expenses paid for two, including round-trip fare on the S. S. District of Columbia, of the N. & W. S. S. Co., and a week at the Martha Washington Hotel at the ocean resort.

Every citizen of Washington is urged to be on the alert for any deed by an officer they deem worthy, and to write a brief description of it to the management of the Fox, together with the name of the officer or the number of his shield.

A committee of prominent citizens will weigh the evidence and make their award on, or immediately after, April 7, the date the contest—if that is what it is—will close.

I am led to believe that the marking of parked cars will not count!

Indian Seer on Way To Form U. S. Cult

Parsee, Called "God-Man," Will Crusade Against Religious Bars.

Bombay, India, March 25 (A.P.).—Meher Baba, the Parsee seer whose followers call him the "God-Man," left today for the United States to make the Americans realize the "infinite state" which he has enjoyed since he first saw the divine light many years ago.

He discussed his crusade with the Associated Press correspondent but he did not speak a word, for he took a vow of silence eight years ago. Instead, he answered questions by writing on a blackboard. He will break his vow, he wrote, when he gets to Harmon, N. Y., to establish a spiritual retreat something like that which Mahatma Gandhi maintains in India.

There he intends to break down all religious barriers, destroy American materialism and amalgamate all creeds into a common element of love.

(Awarded Book Prize.)

8 lbs. fresh or smoked ham (Sanitary)
3 lbs. kale
2 cups sliced onions
Leaves and top of one bunch of celery
Salt and pepper

Boil ham half an hour, take out of water and let cool. Clean kale and celery, pour boiling water over and let stand till leaves are all withered. Cut kale and celery up so it is easy to handle, mix with onions. Take sharp butcher knife and stab the ham to the bone in miscellaneous places all over, the stabs being from one-half to one inch apart. Then stuff each stab with the kale, celery and onion mixture. Sew ham up in tight fitting bag or cloth and boil in fresh water till well cooked. This is very good served hot or cold and the green mixed through the pork looks very attractive.

MRS. LLOYD CHAVEZ.

(Honorable Mention.)

1 cup cooking molasses (Brer Rabbit)
1 teaspoon soda
¾ teaspoon salt
2½ cups sweet milk
2 cups white flour (Sanico)
4 cups bran (Pillsbury Health Bran)

Stir the soda and salt into the molasses till it is light and foamy. Add 1 cup flour and stir well. Add the remaining flour and the 4 cups bran alternately with the milk. This mixture will appear to be a little thin but do not add any more flour or bran. Bake in well-greased gem tins in a moderate oven. This quantity makes from 20 to 22 branulettes, according to size of tins.

MRS. E. E. LAMPHIER.

(Honorable Mention.)

Hard cook eggs, allowing one to each person to be served. Remove yolks, and while hot mash with 1 teaspoonful melted butter to each yolk, and season with salt and pepper to taste. Add mayonnaise to soften so mixture can be formed into balls the size of an egg yolk. Take white cream or cottage cheese, salted to taste and thinned with cream so it can be molded around the yolk ball until it is the size and shape of an egg. Wrap around the center of this egg a strip of pimiento ¾ inch wide. Over the rest of the egg press in thin slices of stuffed olives to make it look like a dyed egg. Shred lettuce, toss in French dressing, make nests on the salad plate, put an egg into each nest, dot around with mayonnaise and sprinkle over all a little paprika. Serve very cold.

KATHERINE RICKARD.
Care of 1008 Spring road northwest.

EASTER SALAD.
(Honorable Mention.)

6 slices pineapple
6 canned half apricots
1 gill whipping cream
¼ cup mayonnaise
¼ pound American cheese, grated
Paprika

Place a slice of pineapple on a leaf of lettuce. Fill the center of pineapple with grated cheese. Combine mayonnaise with whipped cream and cover the slice of pineapple and cheese with this mixture.

Drain apricots thoroughly and place one piece, rounded side up, in the center of each serving of salad. Sprinkle on a little paprika and you have an Easter salad that looks identical to a poached egg.

The Homemaker

By NANCY CAREY

Wishes All a Happy Easter.

IT is my hope that tomorrow may be a day of shining glory, warm, and as clear as the bells which will peal from the church towers of the world. Then may we wear the new bonnet as we go forth to worship. A new bonnet for Easter seems to be a tradition dating back beyond the first ones we remember. For me those first bonnets to remember, those worn by grown-ups, of course, still cause wonder in my soul.

How, I still ask myself, did even six ornate and long hatpins keep them perched upon those vast pompadours? Just why, on an Easter Sunday rife with early spring breezes, didn't they sail out across the plains as do the aircraft of our present era? May I wish you a happy holiday surrounded by those who are your own? My girls of the institute join me in saying, "a happy Easter to you."

And now the last of our plans and your recipe for Swedish cookies, M. B. G.

Pineapple Canape.

Cut thin slices of bread in fancy shapes. Spread with whipped cream mixed with shredded pineapple and cottage cheese. Sprinkle with chopped nuts.

Baked Virginia Ham.

Soak the ham overnight in cold water, if desired. Put in large pot, cover with hot water and add one-half pint of molasses and a pint and a half of cider, a small onion, a bay leaf and a teaspoonful each of paprika and ground cloves. Bring to a boil and simmer, allowing 20 minutes to the pound, with 15 or 20 minutes added to this time if ham is large. Allow the ham, when cooked, to cool in the same water, then remove the outside skin, place in a roasting pan, sprinkle with brown sugar and stick whole cloves in the ham at intervals. Place in pan one cupful of nonalcoholic sherry or water, and bake for half an hour in a hot oven, basting frequently. It is best to buy the large end of the ham when less than a whole ham is required, as the smaller end has more bone and gristle in proportion to the meat. If a part of a ham is used with this recipe, the seasoning should be reduced accordingly. Be careful not to let the ham boil, as in the simmering lies the secret of its delicacy and flavor.

Baked Celery and Sweet Potatoes With Maple Sirup.

1 stalk celery—cut in pieces
4 sweet potatoes
1 cup maple sirup
3 teaspoons butter
Salt and pepper to taste.

Boil the celery and sweet potatoes separately in salted water for about twenty minutes. Drain off the water. Peel and slice the potatoes. Place celery, potatoes, butter and seasonings in a baking dish. Pour over them the maple sirup. Bake in a moderate oven for about twenty minutes and serve hot.

Cabbage, Apple and Nut Salad.

Cut cabbage and apples into fairly small pieces and combine them in equal quantities. Add a few chopped walnuts, mix with well-seasoned mayonnaise and serve on crisp yellow lettuce leaves.

Swedish Cookies.
(For M. B. G.)

1 cup shortening
1 cup sugar
1 egg yolk
½ teaspoon salt
1¾ cups flour
1 teaspoon almond extract

Cream shortening and sugar, add egg yolk and flavoring. Sift in flour gradually. Chill batter and put through pastry tube in desired shapes. The cookies may be brushed with egg white and sprinkled with sugar or chopped nuts before baking. Bake in moderate (350 degrees) oven for about fifteen minutes.

Answers to Readers.

Dear Miss Carey: I have been told to eat plenty of fruit and vegetables in order to reduce, and now I find that apples, oranges, pears, etc., are equal in caloric value to potatoes. Will you please explain to me why they are recommended while potatoes and bread are taboo? Thank you. SARA.

First of all, Sara, you must understand that potatoes and bread are not "taboo" in a reducing diet. Both are excellent foods and, provided care is taken to keep within the caloric allowance indicated to lose weight, no harm can come from their use, no upsetting of any well-planned diet regimen. The important thing is to eat moderately at all times. If this were done there would be no need for this little column of ours. The problem of controlling weight successfully would be for the most part solved.

However, the reason why bread and potatoes have always been considered "fattening" and the whole cause of overweight is no doubt because of the frequency with which they are included in the average diet. Liked by most everyone, they furnish energy and many other excellent food properties at comparatively small cost. The danger, then, has been not in the foods themselves but in the amount used, also to a too-liberal use of butter with them. I admit a nice, big, mealy baked potato with a generous piece of butter on top is all that it is intended to be—appetizing and good for you, but those overweight had best forget about the butter or take only a little, and be sure to eat the skin. That is where fruits have an advantage over more concentrated foods. Eaten raw and, when possible, with the skins, they not only are equally nutritious but tend to satisfy the appetite much more readily. And, after all, that is what one on a diet to reduce weight must do—satisfy his appetite, but for the most part with the fruits and vegetables which furnish the necessary bulk.

Nancy Carey

Shelled lima beans at 35 cents a pint are out of the prohibitive class right now, in view of their usually low price for this time of year and in view of the fact that one is willing to allow a little more for the Easter dinner cost than for the usual Sunday dinner's expense budget.

PINEAPPLE CAKE RECIPE WINS $5

Post Award Goes to Miss Alice Kerfoot; Formula for Dessert.

Upside-down or rightside-up, pineapple cake is an excellent dessert.

This week's Post $5 recipe award was won by an entry named "upside-down pineapple cake." It seems that it is made upside-down and comes out rightside-up or vice versa.

But disregarding discussion concerning which side is up, upside-down pineapple cake seems to be a worthy oven product. The formula was submitted by Miss Alice Kerfoot, of Riverdale, Md.

2-3 cup Sanitary butter (Sanitary Grocery Co.)
1 cup sugar (Sanitary Grocery Co.)
2 Sanico eggs (Sanitary Grocery Co.)
2½ cups Sanico flour (Sanitary Grocery Co.)
3 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
4 tablespoons Sanitary butter (Sanitary Grocery Co.)
1 cup sugar (Sanitary Grocery Co.)
1 can Honey Dew Ripe Hawaiian Pineapple (Sanitary Grocery Co.)
Sweetened whipped cream

Grease the sides of a baking pan and melt four tablespoons of butter in it. Sprinkle sugar over it and arrange drained pineapple so as to make a complete layer. Add cake dough and bake to a rich shade of brown.

A clever Easter gift from guests to the hostess at an Easter dinner is the marmalade in attractive jars for 25 cents that the Meanderer saw in one market. The jars are decorated with a silver deposit pattern. For another quarter the seller of the marmalade will give you a marmalade dish, also a top for the silver and glass jar in the jet black china so popular now. So for 50 cents one gets the marmalade, a marmalade dish and a potential marmalade jar.

Market Meanderings

By MILDRED REED BUNDY

Always the Meanderer finds the flowers in the markets a powerful counter-attraction to the foods. Sometimes she lingers a long time among them and then hurries through her duties as inspector of foods for the body. During this Easter season, probably more than at any other time in the year, flowers have a particular appeal, signifying the end of winter, as well as the sacred meanings that flowers help the church convey.

This year, more than for many years, the florists' spring blooms attract with double strength, for those in the home gardens have been blighted by snow, ice and unrelenting winds. In Washington's gardens daffodils and other bulb plants had begun to bloom before the delayed winter burst down upon them. So the few stunted flowers, with some of their petals discolored that we are able to cut from the garden, are rivalled strongly by the perfect blossoms that have had hot-house protection. So, as you fill your market basket today for your very special Easter dinner, Mrs. Housewife, you'll deeply enjoy the masses of spring flowers with their heavy fragrance everywhere among the foods, and you will find it hard to choose among the arrayed loveliness of bright-colored little flowers asserting themselves under the white, dominating beauty of the Easter lilies.

Where did the idea of having ham for Easter originate? That isn't at all clear to the Meanderer. But it is clear that on the menu in many homes ham is the main dish of the Easter feast. Ham, as the thrifty housewife knows, has been an economical meat choice for months. One might expect that with the Easter demand the price would be much higher. This is not true, however, a meat marketer who has watched all such developments for many years told the Meanderer. Hams for Easter should sell for well under 20 cents a pound. Last year Easter hams were nearer 25 cents a pound than 20 cents.

"The Easter hams have been on order for weeks by the meat dealers," the Meanderer's meat market friend explained. "So with all the orders placed and prices set, there will be no startling advance in price. Probably the low mark of 15 cents we've had for some weeks will rise a little, but it is safe to say that for under 20 cents a pound you can buy a nice Easter ham."

"Which part of the ham would you buy, if your family is small and not fond enough of ham to warrant buying a whole ham?" the Meanderer asked the marketer, voicing a question that probably perplexes many housewives. "Depends on the kind of slices you want from it," the dealer said. "While the butt end of the ham has a rounder, better appearance on the table, it doesn't slice so well as the shank end. The shank bone is smaller and less difficult to cut around than is the bone at the butt end. For my part I'd choose the shank end." All that in favor of the shank, after years of positive opinion on the part of the Meanderer that the butt end of the ham is the best buy! So much, then, for the shanks and other divisions of ham. That's not very important anyway. The taste is the thing, and all parts of the ham taste alike. It may taste pretty monotonous, too, before it's used up, unless the housewife is thoughtful enough to buy some other meats to give variety to the Easter week meat menu.

Since ham may be kept safely for a long time in a cool place, there is no need to bore the family by serving it continuously. There are ways, too, of putting different touches to its serving each time—ham with different accessories, one might say. If you are one of the fortunate and thrifty purchasers of the sliced pineapple bargains of the last week or so, you probably are planning to use the very good combination of ham and pineapple. Horseradish sauce, made by combining horseradish with whipped cream or whipped evaporated milk, is an excellent accessory for the ham, and certain to please the masculine appetite. Fried bananas and current jelly with ham, sound tantalizing and are suggested for Easter by some experts in cooking hams.

The Bureau of Home Economics of the Department of Agriculture has published two leaflets which contain information on cooking ham. One is Leaflet No. 45, Pork in Preferred Ways, and the other is Leaflet No. 81, Cooking Cured Pork.

In the same breath with ham one should speak about eggs. At least, eggs belong rightfully on many hot menus; particularly breakfast menus, of course. Ham may be on the Easter breakfast menu, rather than on the dinner schedule. Then, of course, eggs come into one of their most important accompanying duties. And the cheering news that Easter is not likely to see a jump in the price of eggs is straight from a reputable dealer in one of Washington's big wholesale markets! He says that 18 cents a dozen, or two dozen eggs for 35 cents, is a fair retail price for eggs today. Many farmers are receiving but 12 cents a dozen from the wholesale egg buyers, so that the retail dealer, in all fairness, stays under the 20-cent mark on the dozen.

Asparagus should not be an impractical choice for the Easter dinner. This week the Meanderer found bunches of asparagus, thick, tender stalks, too—for 30 to 35 cents a bunch. The bunches weigh approximately a pound, sometimes a little more. For this season that is a reasonable price, indeed, considering that the asparagus comes all the way from California.

OUR DAILY FOOD

By COLONEL GOODBODY

VANILLA, OUR FAVORITE FLAVORING EXTRACT.

DO men like the odor of vanilla better than women do, or vice versa? That may sound like a foolish question, but it's a question than can be answered. Somebody asked several hundred men and women what odors they like best. And the answer shows why vanilla is of such supreme importance in the everyday business of cooking.

The women liked the odor of vanilla better than did the men. But only a little better. In a long list of odors, vanilla was a prime favorite with both men and women. What happened was that these several hundred men and women were asked to list 55 different odors, in the order in which they liked or disliked them. The men listed vanilla as No. 13; the women list it as No. 10.

Coffee was high up on both men's and women's lists. The aroma of coffee is apparently a sure-fire hit with both men and women. Chocolate, too, is a favorite with both. Curiously, women like the odor of apple and the odor of vanilla equally well. Men put the apple odor even higher, before vanilla, making it run neck and neck with peppermint. Other favorites with men are orange, strawberry, raspberry, pineapple, lemon, maple, cantaloupe, cinnamon and peach. But women apparently like the odors of strawberry and raspberry considerably better than men do.

That doesn't surprise me. There's something decidedly appealing about the scent of pine needles. I always associate it with a crackling fire out in the woods, and juicy broiled steak, and fragrant hot coffee. I believe I'd place the odors of pine and coffee at the top of my list.

Pure extract vanilla, of course, is made from vanilla beans, which come from a certain variety of orchid, almost the only one of the hundreds of species of orchids that is prized for something besides its beauty as a flower. The soft brown vanilla beans are put in a sort of giant percolator, and alcohol runs through them and takes out the flavor and aroma—just as the flavor and aroma are percolated out of coffee, at breakfast. There is some water in vanilla extract also—and perhaps a bit of sugar.

The real secret of making fine vanilla lies in selecting the best beans, and in blending the percolated extract from beans of different kinds. Some beans give a mild, some a strong extract. The vanilla expert, who is much like a perfume expert, blends them together until he gets just the combination he considers perfect. The pure vanilla extract you use may be a blend from three kinds of beans—beans from Mexico — beans from Tahiti — and beans from Bourbon, a picturesque island in the Indian Ocean, near Madagascar. Making this pure vanilla extract takes a long time; and after it is made, it is aged in wood.

So pure vanilla always costs more than the imitation flavor, which can be made in a very short time, with an artificial flavor and color.

And, by the way, that flavor, vanilla, that's used all over the earth today, is another one of America's gifts to the world. The plants first grew in Mexico, and the native Mexicans were the first to use vanilla. The name, in fact, is a Mexican word—it means "little pod"—from the bean-pods.

Washington FLOUR Offers
$150 in Gold

For the best essays written by the school children of Washington on the subject of "George Washington, the Miller."

The Father of His Country was famous in this section for his skill and success in the manufacture of flour, and we feel that it is especially appropriate at this time to inspire the investigation of this phase of the great patriot's life. For that reason we are offering $150 in gold as an incentive to the school children—public, parochial and private—to write an essay on this subject.

THE GARBLE SISTERS

"WELL, I was glad to see Sirovich win the Grand National, wasn't you?"

"Was it Sirovich? I thought it was Phar Lap."

"It was a man named Febra: I read about it in the paper. There's a lot of news in the papers these days. What do you think of the German election?"

"De Valera didn't win the German election."

"Didn't he?"

"Yeah. I see where Senator Seabury favors 4 per cent beer to help get the Government out of the hole."

"You mean the Linthicum-LaGuardia bill?"

"I guess that's it. Linthicum is getting a lot of publicity. He's the congressman that got after those dramatic critics, ain't he? Or am I thinking of Alfalfa Bill Garner?"

* * * * *

"Oh, yes; I remember now. By the way, how did Smith come out in New Hampshire?"

"Justice Cardoza beat him."

* * * * *

"DO you think the Republicans will run Hoover again or profit by the Literary Digest poll and run Franklin Roosevelt?"

"Well, Roosevelt got a lot of votes when he removed Texas Jack Murray as sheriff of New York in that investigation into New York politics being conducted by the Reconstruction Corporation."

"What's new in the Sinus-Japanese situation?"

"Nothing, except that Gen. Ma Ferguson has joined the Japs, leaving the Chinese armies under the command of Gen. Kai Huey Long."

* * * * *

"Oh, he finally made Connie Mack pay him the $80,000, but he was traded to St. Louis for Crisp, Rainey and a third feller whose name I forget."

"F. Scott McBride?"

The Destitute Face Problem.

BEAUTY parlor proprietors are being urged to establish free clinics for the treatment of, so to speak, destitute faces. It is said to be amazing how many women are letting their faces get all run down these days.

This is the time of year when people begin pouring into town from Florida just in time to spend the winter at home.

A good way to arouse suspicion these days is to talk about trading in a car that you have driven less than three years.

A Fair Question.

A New Haven, Conn., hotel has adopted an idea which should interest hotel men in these days of financial problems. It makes breakfast on the premises compulsory. The rate is quoted on the basis of room with breakfast, and if you don't want breakfast it's your own loss. They tell the story of a cloak and suiter who stopped there recently and, skipping breakfast, went in for dinner and ordered everything on the menu.

"It all goes with the price of my room," he said when presented with the check.

"Can I help it if I overslept?" was the reply.

SATURDAY MARCH 26, 1932 SPORTS

BROWN FACES FIRST TEST AGAINST ORIOLES TODAY

This MORNING with SHIRLEY L. POVICH

Biloxi, Miss., March 25.

COME what may of its pennant chances, Clark Griffith regards the 1932 edition of his Washington ball club as the most interesting team he has ever owned or managed.

The possibilities of the Nats this season are tremendous, Grifith believes, with each department of play potentially brilliant. In past seasons, the Washington club has been carried along by clever pitching, smart infielding and heady base running, but 1932 finds the Nats boasting in addition a slugging array that never before graced their roster.

The first time in his 20-year career as owner and manager of the Washington club, Griffith finds himself possessed of the slugging that has won pennants for other teams, while the Nats have also retained the other gratifying features which Griffith has always insisted upon—speed on the bases, precise infielding, and good pitching.

At this stage of the proceedings, the Nats' success on the offensive seem to revolve about the man in sixth place in the batting order. If Joe Kuhel or Joe Judge, or whomever else may be assigned this position in the batting line-up, responds with a good average, Griffith does not fear for the team's success.

"Reynolds gives us a great punch in fifth place in the batting line-up," said Griffith today, "but much of his value will be lost if we can't have a strong hitter behind him. The pitchers will walk Reynolds to get to the weak man in sixth place and much of our punch will be lost.

"We have never had such a batting line-up among the first five, even in our pennant winning days in 1924 and 1925, but we have got to have another strong hitter batting sixth or the first five may not do us as much good as we expect. If the pitchers can walk Reynolds to get to a weak hitter in sixth place, that virtually reduces our sluggers to four."

◆

At the present writing, Joe Kuhel is regarded as the man most likely to hit in the sixth position, barring the possibility that Joe Judge will crowd him from the first base job. Johnson and Griffith are banking much on Kuhel's improvement at bat, although they declare his .269 average of last year is no index of his value. Kuhel's record for batting in runs is far greater than his average shows.

In the event that Kuhel fails to measure up to requirements at bat, Joe Judge is the likely nominee for sixth place in the order. For years, Judge occupied third and fifth positions with the Nats, but he has lost caste with Manager Johnson despite his lifetime average of .300. Judge in recent seasons has not connected for the extra base wallops of his prime.

There is another possibility for this position in sixth place in the batting line-up. He is Ossie Bluege, with a lifetime batting average of only .279, but with a known proclivity for driving in runs. Bluege, now batting seventh, may be moved up to sixth position.

"Bluege is what I would call a spasmodic hitter," says Griffith. "You know he goes great in the spring of every year and then tails off. If Kuhel or Judge don't do the job well in sixth place, Johnson is very likely to move Bluege up a notch in the batting order.

"I've seen times when Bluege's hitting would carry the ball club for a month at a time. You remember last year when he was way above .300 in the early weeks of the season, hitting home runs and everything. He may be Johnson's man for sixth place by the time the season starts.

"We've got another fine hitter in Spencer. He hits that ball hard, but hits in hard luck that the averages don't show. Johnson would probably use him a bit higher in the batting order if it were not for the fact that he wants to have a little punch left for the bottom of the ladder."

Mr. Griffith and Manager Johnson will do some watchful waiting in the first few weeks of the season with their eyes on the work of the man in sixth place in the batting order.

Wood, Golden Are Tied at Pinehurst

Kirkwood's 287 Third in Annual North-South Open.

By DILLON L. GRAHAM.

PINEHURST, N. C., March 25 (A. P.).—Shooting consistently fine golf through the last two rounds, Johnny Golden, rotund Noroton, Conn., star, this afternoon caught and tied Craig Wood, of Deal, N. J., for first place in the North and South golf tournament with a 72-hole total of 286.

While Wood was slipping from a pair of great 69's yesterday to 72 and 76 today, Golden fired a 72 this morning and a par 71 this afternoon to force a play-off for the title. It was thought probable tonight they would split first and second money, totaling $2,500.

They will play eighteen holes of medal play, starting at 10:30 tomorrow morning, marking the second successive year a play-off has been necessary in this tournament. Wiffy Cox defeated Joe Turnesa in the extra round last year.

Wood Finds Trouble Near End.

The blond Wood, who held the second and third round leadership and passed the 54-hole mark with 210, five strokes ahead of the field, experienced much trouble with woods and approaches today and only good recoveries kept the final round down to 76.

His trouble started on the short fourth, where his drive was hooked into the woods, his second bunkered and a five recorded. On the eighteenth his drive was bunkered, his second short, his third over and his chip short over, resulting in a six.

Close to par scores all the way, with an eagle 3 on the sixteenth, allowed Golden to tie. He was playing all shots well and his putting was good. Golden has a record of consistency in play-offs and last year defeated George Von Elm that way at Agua Caliente.

Joe Kirkwood, of New York, shot four steady rounds for 287 to capture $750 third money. Johnny Farrell and Wiffy Cox tied for fourth at 289 and drew $525 each.

Gene Sarazen, of New York, who started well and generally finishes strong, slumped to 77 this afternoon and finished in a tie at 292 with Billi Mehlhorn, of New York, for sixth place, and they divided $550.

Runyan Also Slips.

Paul Runyan, of White Plains, N. Y., first round leader, also slipped to 78 in the afternoon and tied John Kinder, of Irvington, N. J., and Denny Shute, of Columbus, Ohio, at 293 for eighth money, $150 each.

Billie Burke, national open champion, fell far behind with 299, and Willie Macfarlane, of Tuckahoe, N. Y., who had 222 after 54 holes, picked up on the last nine today.

J. M. Robbins, of Philadelphia,

Women's Golf Body Secretary Is Dead

Grand Rapids, Mich., March 25 (A.P.).—Miss Madge Miller, of Detroit, executive secretary of the United States Golf Association's women's committee and former woman amateur golf champion of Michigan, died here today. She suffered a replase following an operation several weeks ago.

Miss Miller twice played in the women's British open tournament as well as the international matches in 1930.

In addition to her ability as a golfer, Miss Miller was a prominent contralto soloist. She was born in Grand Rapids 44 years ago.

Central and Saks to Clash Tonight in A.A.U. Semifinal

'C' Club Faces Test; North Preps Play St. John's Five.

A GAME that has had basket ball fans buzzing since early in the District A. A. U.-Washington Post court tournament will be promulgated tonight at 9:30 o'clock at Tech High Gymnasium when the Saks Clothiers, that all-high, all-collegiate aggregation of basket ball marksmen, meet up with Central High's "C" Club Team.

Preceding this crucial semifinal round game, the St. John's Victors, aces of the prep school ranks, meet the wildly shooting Northern Preps at 8:30 o'clock in a game which will decide the team which will meet St. Stephen's upset masters in the final round.

Central-Saks Promise Real Fight

The Central-Saks game seems likely to break all tournament attendance records. The two clubs stand out like lights in District basket ball. Saks has acquired the greatest independent basket ball reputation enjoyed by any team in the District in recent sports history. Its handpicked, exclusive list of marksmen, culled from the cream of the crop, is the closest thing to an actual playing all-high team ever gathered here.

Bernie Jones and Bobby Lucas, forwards, were unanimous all-high choices while at Business. Bill Noonan was all-high center at Eastern. Sammy Hook, guard, has been called by a consensus of officials as the greatest independent basket ball player developed in Washington of late. Johnny Sherman is the best shot of them all, and his Trojan work with Benjamin Franklin University did much to put that institution in the sports headlines. The reserves include such players as Robey, Fisher, Beckey, Sebastian and Genovese, all capable of filling any sort of gap in the starting Saks line-up.

Central has earned a host of supporters since it inconspicuously started its tournament campaign against Calvary M. E. It looked better against Palace, and then startled local basket ball by downing the Griffith Consumers, seeded No. 1 team of the tournament, 39 to 33.

St. John's-Northerns to Furnish Action

As to tonight's outcome, the fact should be borne in mind that the Griffith Consumers beat Saks for the section A, Community Center League championship, and Central beat the Griffs. Central will unleash its collection of scholastic stars once more, chief among them being Budy Nau, Billy Burke, Bits Keysere, Gene Swift and Rex Smith. Nau was a sensation in the Central-Griffith Consumer game.

Not a few fans are looking for an upset in the St. John's-Northern Prep game. The Saints will be without the full time services of Fred Scheele, high-scoring forward, who was injured in practice Wednesday, but still packs plenty of power in Johnny Breen and Gabby Hartnett. The stock in the Northern Preps skyrocketed early in the week when they beat the "Y" Flashes, 43 to 7.

King Levinsky Ready To Take On Walker

Chicago, March 25 (U.P.).—King Levinsky, Chicago heavyweight, is ready to meet Mickey Walker, former middleweight champion, who held Jack Sharkey to a draw in his last important bout, his sister-manager, Mrs. Lena Levy, announced today.

"Stories that Levinsky is afraid to meet Walker are absurd," said Mrs. Levy. "We'll take Walker any time and I am going to ask Nate Lewis to make the match as soon as he returns from New York."

Women's Sweepstakes Won by Mrs. Young

Mrs. Lucile Young, ace of the Rendezvous team in the Ladies District League, won the Greater Washington Sweepstakes last night at Convention Hall, with a mark of 1,690, including minor marks of 556, 513, and 521, and a 100 handicap.

She took first prize of $20.

Swim Mark to Clapp; Stanford Takes Lead

Ann Arbor, Mich., March 25 (U.P.). Stanford University looked to be more than an even bet to lift Michigan's national collegiate swimming title after the preliminaries had been completed tonight. The five-man team from the West Coast already had scored seven points in the one event run off and had eight qualifiers for the finals on Saturday.

Michigan had four points and boasted six qualifiers for the finals, while Northwestern and Princeton had four each and the Navy three.

Austin Clapp, of Stanford, set a new American record to win the 1,500 meter's swim this afternoon, negotiating the distance in 20:03.2. Jim Cristy, of Michigan, was second, almost half a lap behind; Ted Wiget, Stanford, third, and Frank Kennedy, fourth.

Shore Keeps Baltimore Crown

Capital Youth Beats Schwartzman by 6-3, 11-9, 6-2.

Maryland Lad Wilts After Second Set in Sun Tourney.

Special to The Washington Post.

BALTIMORE, Md., March 25.—Duplicating his victory of last year, Frank Shore, jr., of Washington, this afternoon won the Junior championship of The Evening Sun-Fifth Regiment indoor tennis tournament by defeating Maurice Schwartzman, of Baltimore, 6-3, 11-9, 6-2, at the Armory.

Although a heavy favorite to win, Shore found splendid opposition in Schwartzman. The local youth fought point for point and staged a courageous battle in the second set, carrying his opponent twenty games before admitting defeat.

Schwartzman and Shore opened the second set with a service duel until Shore finally smashed through his opponent's serve. Of the two, Shore was the stronger from the service line.

Schwartzman Loses His Grip.

Schwartzman apparently had shot his bolt and as the final set progressed he lost interest and was an easy prey for Shore.

Shore was seeded first by reason of defending his title, while Schwartzman, who represented the Mondawmin Club, was seeded seventh.

In the finals of the boys' tournament, preceding the junior encounter, Albert Shapiro, Forest Park High School youngster, won the championship by defeating Max Askin, of Public School No. 79, by 6-3, 6-3.

Title Indoor Polo Play Delayed by Illnesses

New York, March 25 (A.P.).—Illness of several players has caused a four-day postponement in the start of the national indoor polo championships. Instead of opening March 29, as originally scheduled, the first matches will be played next Saturday, April 2, with additional engagements the nights of April 5, 7, 9, 13, 15 and 19.

French Build Auto For New Record Trial

Paris, March 25. (U.P.).—French engineers have constructed an automobile in which they hope to break the world speed records held by Malcolm Campbell of Great Britain, it was learned here today.

The car, constructed by Strapp engineers, is expected to average apprbximately 360 miles per hour. It will be raced on the La Baule sands and if the runs there are satisfactory, it will be taken to Daytona Beach, Fla.

The machine is shaped like a bullet and weighs two and one-half tons. It is thirty feet long and is powered by three Jupiter 800-horsepower motors. A 60-horsepower Voisin motor is used to start the automobile.

Phar Lap to Visit Eastern Race Tracks

San Francisco, March 25 (A.P.).—Phar Lap, great Australian gelding and winner of the 1932 Agua Caliente $50,000 Handicap, may participate in a special race at Tanforan Track, near San Francisco.

David J. Davis, one of the owners of Phar Lap, advised Tanforan officials he would be interested in a special race if financial inducements are sufficient. The purse probably would be $25,000. The track opens March 31.

Davis said the big horse, now resting at a ranch at Menlo Park, was in fine condition and later would be taken to Chicago and other Eastern tracks.

BLAZING THE BASEBALL TRAIL

Winter Haven, Fla., March 25 (A.P.) The Philadelphia Nationals, in the opinion of Manager Burt Shotton, are in better condition for this time of the training season than they have been in recent years, but several players are at present handicapped by minor ailments.

George Davis, outfielder star of the American Association last year, has a painful charley horse. Hal Lee, another flychaser, also has a charley horse, but is recovering.

A sore arm and swollen ankles are Chuck Klein's complaint. Frank Watt has a stiff arm. Ray Benge is complaining about a soreness in his shouder. Jim Elliott has sciatica.

Fort Myers, Fla., March 25 (A.P.).—With activities at the Philadelphia Athletics training camp held in check by rain, Connie Mack's players devoted themselves today mostly to resting and discussing the ill-fortune of their team mate, Mickey Cochrane.

The star backstop was resting comfortably today in the hospital at Lakeland and hoped to be on his way to Philadelphia Sunday or Monday. Two incisions were made in his left foot yesterday to check an infection which originated with a blister on the instep.

Savannah, Ga., March 25 (A.P.).—Tripp Sigman, former Philly outfielder, today set a few long hitting records for others of the Boston Red Sox squad to shoot at. Tripp banged three balls over the right field seats, which have not been hit by any other Red Hose this season.

This performance forced Manager "Shano" Collins to find a place for Sigman in the regular line-up and he will take Jack Rothrock's station in left field tomorrow when the Sox go to Macon for their second tilt with the Hartford Eastern Leaguers.

New Orleans, La., March 25 (A.P.). While the Cleveland Indians went through a routine drill here today, Billy Evans, general manager of the Indians, announced that he was conferring with George Weis, business manager of the New York Yankees, about several Newark International League players being sent on option to the Toledo Mud Hens.

The Newark team is controlled by the Yankees and the Toledo American Association team by the Indians.

Evans denied that the Yankees were renewing offers to trade Tony Lazerri, infielder, for Willis Hudlin or Mel Harder, Cleveland pitchers.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 25 (A. P.).—Wally Berger, who led the Boston Braves at bat last season, today came to terms with President Emil Fuchs. The slugging outfielder was the last Brave to sign up, although he has been training with the squad for the past month.

Bradentown, Fla., March 25 (A.P.). With Sylvester Johnson and Jim Lindsay combining to hold the Dodgers to one hit, the world champion St Louis Cardinals defeated Brooklyn 7 to 1 today. Cuccinello connected with the Dodger's only hit, a single off Johnson in the fifth.

The Dodgers were saved from a

Baseball Practice Today at Gonzaga

Squad of 35 Is Expected to Report; Only Three Veterans Return.

Gonzaga High will open its spring baseball training camp today at Rosedale Playgrounds at 10 o'clock, when Coach Orrel Mitchell will put a squad of 35 through the preliminaries of the diamond game.

Little remains of the 1931 Gonzaga team. Ray Grace, third baseman; Reds Quigley and Jim Donohoe, cachers, are the only veterans back, but Mitchell believes he has promising material in the squad, notably Dick Hall and Ed Burley, outfielders, and Davey James, Joe Keegin, Rod Bell, Bill Mills and Jack Carr, pitchers.

Willie Watt, the old sandlotter, will officiate at the high school baseball series once again this year. He was elected at the meeting of the faculty advisers this week.

The faculty advisers pigeon-holed the suggestion that the 5-4-3-2-1 system of point distribution be introduced in the high school track meet this year, but a personal view expressed by one of the advisers concerned, predicts that it will be adopted next year.

Navy Annexes Saber Intercollegiate Title

New York, March 25 (A.P.).—Columbia's sabre team, intercollegiate champion for the past four years, was dethroned by the Navy in the final round robin of the Intercollegiate Fencing Association sabre competition here tonight.

Columbia defeated Navy in the final round robin, 3-1, but lost the title on the basis of touches. Columbia and Navy each finished with two victories and one defeat but Navy's sabre stars were touched only 42 times to 44 for Columbia in the three matches.

Army finished third in the final sabre standing and Yale fourth.

Plestina Invades At Bolling Field

Strong Man Is to Tackle Benkert in Feature Monday Night.

The Bowser boys, operating their tableaux of growl and maul at Bolling Field each Monday night, will show one of their organization's proudest boasts the day after Easter when they unveil Marin Plestina, 240-pound huskie, who recently startled rassling fans by throwing six opponents in 17 minutes at the Boston Garden. Among Plestina's assorted victims was Tommy Texis, tough Greek.

Plestina is rated one of the strongest men ever to take up his vocation. He will meet August Benkert here. Benkert is claimant of the Belgian heavyweight title, and until a late hour last night no one had disputed his word.

Billy Bartush, one of the most popular boys ever developed here, meets a rugged customer in Marvin Westenberg, whose place in the Bowser sun corresponds to Szabo's in the circuit which supplies Promoter Joe Turner. Others on the bill are Lee Wykoff, who held Jim Browning to 52 minutes at St. Nick's in New York last week, and Rudy Laditzi; Dr Len Hall and Mike Miller and Dutch Green and Bob Grant.

Tickets at Goldie Ahearn's.

KENNEDYS TO DRILL.

Northern-Kennedy baseball players have been ordered by Manager Otte to report at 11:30 a. m. tomorrow for practice on the Sixteenth street Reservoir Field. New candidates will be welcomed.

Kuhel Forced To Rest Due To Injury

Fischer Divides Pitching; Griffith May Make Deal.

By SHIRLEY L. POVICH
(Sports Editor of The Post.)

BILOXI, Miss., March 25.—The Nats meet the Baltimore Orioles tomorrow, their pet victims of the spring exhibition games of which the Washington Club has won seven in eight attempts, but of equal significance will be the competitive debut of Lloyd Brown, whose pitching is calculated to keep the Nats in a contending position at least through the early weeks of the pennant campaign.

Brown has completed his recovery from a bruised elbow, working his left arm into shape by easy stages, and Manager Johnson has instructed him to cut loose against the Orioles. Originally, he was slated to share the pitching burden with both Carl Fischer and Bobby Burke, but with Burke still nursing a sore southpaw, Brown and Fischer will divide the work on the hill.

Despite numerous reverses Brown was the most effective of the Nats' pitching staff last spring. His presence on the hill was always a sedative to his own club's batting power, however, and he lost games in which he permitted the opposition only two, three and four hits.

Nats Seeking Fourth Straight Over Orioles.

Fischer, too, will claim a large share of the pitching attention in the early weeks of the season as a result of his performances in 1931, when he hurled impressively and compiled a record of 9 victories and 1 defeat until he broke down under the strain of overwork and barely finished the campaign with 13 wins against 9 losses.

With Fischer and Brown thus slated to hurl tomorrow, the Nats figure to make it four straight over the Orioles, who have had a lead in every game, but have been unable to retain it against the savage assaults of the Washington swatsmiths. The Nats have won seven of their eight exhibition games this season, and in each victory have come from behind to turn the trick.

The first injury of importance to a regular occurred this morning when Joe Kuhel was struck on the gloved hand by a batted ball that took a weird hop, reopening an old cut that will keep him out of the line-up for at least three days. Trainer Mike Martin taped the injured member and ordered Kuhel out of uniform over the week-end.

The injury to Kuhel necessitates the appearance of Joe Judge at first base tomorrow and Sunday against the Orioles, and the veteran first sacker will be given his first real opportunity to reclaim the position which he apparently has lost to the younger Kuhel.

9 Outboard Racers Barred For Tricking English Driver

MIAMI, Fla., March 25 (A.P.).—Nine outboard motor boat racers who competed for the Col. E. H. R. Green trophy in the Biscayne Bay regatta here last week-end were suspended today by the American Power Boat Association pending investigation of charges that they purposely lured Charles H. Harrison, English driver, across the starting line ahead of the signal and thereby disqualified him.

The drivers are William Crawford, jr., of New York, winner of the trophy; Travis Chestnut, of Jacksonville, Fla.; George Martin, of South Bend, Ind.; Guy P. Ellsworth, of Durham, N. C.; Clarence Collins, of Troy, N. Y.; Tommy Estlick, of Waukegan; H. H. Libby, of Kansas City; Horace Tennes, of Chicago, and Cal Leeth, of Cullman, Ala.

The suspensions were announced by George H. Townsend, president of the American Power Boat Association, and Charles F. Chapman, chairman of the National Outboard Racing Association. They witnessed the race, in which Harrison and five other drivers were disqualified for beating the starter's gun.

The others were Tennes, Estlick, Collins, Libby and Leeth. Ellsworth and Martin also beat the gun, but turned back after about 100 yards and went over the starting line a second time. Crawford and Chestnut started after the gun.

Townsend and Chapman said a hearing will be held in New York, probably next month. The racers will be asked to appear personally, but those unable to do so will testify by deposition.

Chapman said one of the drivers, whom he would not name, told him the nine Americans purposely beat the gun to draw Harrison across the line and into disqualification. The Englishman was leading on points for the trophy when the final heat started.

Battalino, Nursing Bruises, Sorry Referee Stopped Bout

By EDWARD J. NEIL.

NEW YORK, March 25 (A.P.).—Christopher ("Bat") Battalino doesn't mind the terrific lacing Billy Petrolle gave him in Madison Square Garden, but he's almost too scared to go home to Hartford, Conn.

"My mother-in-law," he said mournfully today, "nearly dies even when I win. I don't dare think how she'll be, now that I've lost."

While the ring fans went all the way back to the desperate battle of Ad Wolgast and Battling Nelson for fit companion pieces for the gory twelve-round technical knockout Petrolle imposed last night on the former featherweight champion, Battalino underwent very necessary repairs.

Battalino felt that the match, which drew 18,000 customers to the Garden and the biggest indoor house of the season, $65,000, should never have been stopped in the final round with less than 1½ minutes to go, despite his helpless condition.

"Ignacio Fernandez battered me around like that but I knocked him out, and Eddie Shea gave me a worse beating in Chicago, and no one stopped it. I'd have been knocked down, but I would have gotten up," he insisted.

Petrolle, now hailed as the outstanding contender for both the lightweight and welterweight championships, came out of the gruelling slugging match with only a slight cut over his right eye. He probably will not appear here again until the open air summer season, probably against Tony Canzoneri for 135-pound crown in one of the ball parks. His share of the receipts also was about $15,000.

Veteran of a dozen years of warring, Petrolle wandered off calmly by himself this afternoon to a movie where the pictures of last night's fight were on display.

"The old man is weary," he said.

MAKE SPEED SHOWS SPEED IN ST. JOHN'S FEATURE RACE

Chaney Entry Scores at 22 to 1

Morden Up in Time to Annex Third Prize Money.

ST. JOHN'S PARK, Fla., March 25 (A.P.).—Finer weather, coupled with the fact that ladies were admitted free, helped to bolster the attendance here this afternoon. The Bayard Claiming Purse, a dash of six furlongs for 3-year-olds, resulted in a great finish between Make Speed, representing Oscar Chaney, and J. H. Patterson's Infinitive, a field horse. Make Speed made his local debut successful by the smallest of margins, a nose. He returned $47.10 for a $2 ticket. Modern finished third, three lengths behind. The time was 1:15 1-5.

Mae Sweep, the choice, jumped into the lead after the start but she stumbled in the first furlong. Infinitive then took command with Modern, Sun Teatime and Mae Sweep following. Make Speed was back in the middle of the bunch before leaving the stretch, but he made up ground rapidly on the bend. Saving ground at the turn into the stretch, Apprentice Roderick went to work furiously on Make Speed and the gelding gamely outlasted Infinitive.

Hypoluxo Pays $48.20 in Fifth

Hypoluxo badly beaten the previous day romped home an easy winner of the fifth contest to pay $24.20. The high time springer, which raced well at Havana prior to his disappointing performances here, held Little Gyp by a length and a half. Preferred lost the place by a head. Chief's Camille was in the van in the early running but Little Gyp came along to take command leaving the back stretch. Hypoluxo, after breaking far back, worked his way up steadily and finally went down Little Gyp in the closing furlong to win going away.

St. John's to Continue Racing Until Mar. 31

Jacksonville, Fla., March 25 (A.P.).—Acting on the petition of more than 200 horsemen, officials of St. John's Park today decided to continue the meeting as originally scheduled, closing March 31. Yesterday it was decided to terminate the meeting Saturday.

In petitioning for the continuation of the ten-day meeting, the horsemen agreed to accept a cut in purses. As the result, starting next Monday, the purses will be cut from $300 and $400 to $600. Jockeys' fees also will be slashed from the usual $10 for a mount and $25 for a winning mount to the basis of $5 and $15. Salaries of track employes likewise will be lowered.

When Washington Was Younger—No. 233

This hostelry was built about 1802 on the northeast corner of Thirtieth and Bridge (M) streets. The building is still standing, having been remodeled into apartments and stores.

The first proprietor of the hotel was William Crawford, who owned it for fourteen years and then sold it to Peter Brady. It was destroyed by fire in 1832 and rebuilt eight years later. William Wirt was a guest at the hotel on October 14, 1814, and many other famous names were entered on their register. It was used as a hospital during the War of 1812.

CITY WEATHER MENU ON EASTER IN DOUBT AS THRONGS ARRIVE

Private Forecaster Declares Day Will Be Clear, but Showers Threaten.

SPECIAL SERVICES SET AT ALL CHURCHES HERE

50,000 Visitors Expected, Despite Absence of Cherry Blooms.

Whether or no Easter bonnets will bask under a cloudless sun-filled day in the style parade is being pondered by throngs of holiday visitors, residents and the official forecaster of the Weather Bureau, as showers and a drop in temperature threaten.

Nothing more than rather lively winds will threaten the finery parade, according to Herbert Janvrin Brown, private weather forecaster. Any showers that may occur Sunday will be over before or shortly after sunrise and the remainder of the day will be clear, he said.

Students spending their Easter holidays here will not be greeted by the blooming cherry blossoms about the Tidal Basin, as the chilly nights have retarded the maturity of the buds. Despite uncertain weather, however, an estimated crowd of 50,000 is due to arrive for the holiday. Special trains and extra cars on scheduled trains have been added to accommodate visitors.

Egg Rolling Prepared.

Egg rolling Monday on the South Grounds of the White House will be opened at 9 o'clock and continue to 3:30 p. m. for children 10 years of age and under. No adults will be admitted to the grounds except to accompany small children, and only one guardian will be admitted with each child. The general public will be admitted to the concert given by the United States Marine Band from 3:30 to 5 p. m. on the grounds.

Observance of Good Friday yesterday by Washington churches marked the opening of the Easter holiday. A passion service was conducted at the Washington Cathedral by Bishop James E. Freeman. A spotlight focused on a cross banked in palms, and music provided by a hidden choir was featured in "The Service of the Rugged Cross" at the Petworth Methodist Episcopal Church, New Hampshire avenue and Grant circle last night. The congregation received the sacrament of Lord's Supper at the foot of the cross.

Services at the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church were marked by the singing of a quartet and a chorus of fifty voices directed by Claude Robeson and Norton M. Little, and included Miss Elsie Schulze, Miss Mary Apple, William P. Shanahan and Herman Fakler.

Other Services.

The Rev. William Pierpont discussed "Christ on My Cross," at the services in the McKendree Methodist Episcopal Church. Dr. Walter A. Maier, professor of Biblical interpretation at the Concordia Seminary, St. Louis, delivered the sermon at the Christ Lutheran Church. The Rev. J. Frederick Wenchel, pastor of the church, offered prayers written by George Washington. The sermon at the noonday services at the Trinity Lutheran Church was delivered by the Rev. H. D. Mensing, of Baltimore.

Bishop Freeman in his sermon said: "Through the teachings of Christ, and the example of his sacrifice on the Cross, peace from warfare and salvation from the present disturbance afflicting the world can be obtained. The nations in conference at Geneva can achieve success, the cannon spouting death in distant parts of the globe can be quieted and the world can become unified."

Through more than nineteen centuries, the story of the crucifixion still remains the greatest event in history and the power of Christ still prevails, he asserted. Referring to the efforts today of the atheistic groups, he declared that, "in one part of the world they are holding up Christ to shame, blaspheming and crucifying him, but the power of Christ remains unconquerable." He emphasized that new blessings and virtues would result from the present sacrifices and sorrows of unemployment and economic trouble just as the supreme sacrifice of Christ's death brought the world the greatest good in history.

Easter Services Planned.

Easter services tomorrow will be held in all Washington churches.

An Easter sunrise service will be held in the amphitheater at the Arlington National Cemetery at 7:30 Sunday morning by the Grand Commandery of the Knights Templar of the District of Columbia. Delegations from other states will attend. President and Mrs. Hoover, Vice President Curtis and Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Gann, members of the cabinet, Supreme Court, Senate, House, and the entire diplomatic corps have been invited.

Sunday will mark the twentieth anniversary of the planting of the cherry trees here. Their first blooms appeared, according to records of the Office of Public Buildings and Public Parks, in 1924, the single blooms appearing usually during or soon after the Easter celebration.

This year Easter comes earlier than any other year since 1921, when Easter Sunday was celebrated March 27.

Advancing Beyond Time Held Key to Happiness

"The current doctrine in the field of morals is that any action is moral provided the time in which we live regards it as moral," the Rev. Fulton Sheen, professor of philosophy at Catholic University, said last night in his broadcast on the National Catholic hour.

"I propose to prove the superiority of the church's attitude over that of the modern world by showing first of all," he said, "that time stands in the way of real happiness, and secondly, that only inasmuch as we succeed in transcending time, do we begin to be happy."

Banquet Honors Dr. Kemmerer.

WOMAN USES HOME OF FRIEND IN SUICIDE

Federal Printer, Returning From Work, Finds Body; Gas Turned On.

"If I had gas at home I would not have been here," a note to Earl Coldron, of 1740 K street northwest, from Miss Viola Gingell, 46 years old, explained. Mr. Coldron, a proofreader at the Government Printing Office, found the woman's body seated upright in a chair at his apartment, a gas jet tube in her mouth, when he returned home from work yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Coldron summoned the fire rescue squad, which worked over the body for 45 minutes without result. The woman was pronounced dead by Dr. Irving Brockman, of 1746 K street northwest.

Mr. Coldron told police Miss Gingell had been a friend of his family for a number of years. It was her habit, he said, to come over from her apartment, at 1222 Connecticut avenue, nearly every evening and prepare dinner for himself and his brother. She had been despondent, for some weeks, he said, because her trade as a dressmaker had fallen off considerably, and she had been unable to start a drapery business. A sister, Mrs. J. B. McPherson, of Bethesda, was notified of her death.

$2.55 Taxi Theft Costs Trio 6 Years

Guilty Pleas Entered by Men Caught After Robbery of Driver.

Three men who were apprehended by police within a few minutes of the time they threw Ernest M. Morningstar from his taxicab and robbed him of $2.55 yesterday were sent to jail for six years each by Justice James M. Proctor.

The three were William Messick, William G. Duffy and William E. McKenney, and all entered pleas of guilty to robbery.

Messick, Duffy and McKenney were caught by police in Rock Creek Park because a police car came upon Morningstar shortly after the bandits had robbed him and thrown him from his machine. There was a short chase, and the trio were captured before they had a chance to desert Morningstar's cab. The robbery occurred February 10.

Benning Road Tunnel Contract Is Awarded

The contract for construction of an underpass beneath Benning road, at Twenty-fourth street northeast, was awarded to Ligon & Ligon, Baltimore, on its low bid of $4,185, by order of the District Commissioners.

The underpass is a part of a school development in this section for colored children and is designed to enable the children to attend the Young School without crossing the boulevard.

Finance Firm Men Held as Burglars

Two Arrested on Charge of Entering Garage to Seize Tires.

Two agents for a local finance company were arrested on housebreaking charges last night after it was charged they broke into a garage seeking tires on which payments were due.

Those arrested are Lester J. Fletcher, 26, of 3900 Fourteenth street northwest, and Andrew Franklin, 33, of 1324 Fourteenth street northwest. They are said to represent the Central Finance Co.

The complainant reported that the men not only broke into her garage, but also took the machine on which were the tires in question.

NEGRO WORK STATUS IN DISTRICT BARED

Results of a survey of unemployment among Negroes in the District of Columbia, made by the Association for Study of Negro Life and History, were presented last night by Dr Carter G. Woodson, before the Federation of Civic Associations at its regular meeting in the board room of the District Building.

He discussed the color line as it exists in Washington industry, showing changes in employment of Negro workers during recent years, steps taken toward opening new avenues of employment, and the effects of organization of Negro labor. Special consideration was given the trend of employment by the National Government, unfavorable to the Negro in the departmental service.

The federation endorsed the stand of Representative Mary Norton, of New Jersey, chairman of the District committee, favorable to suffrage here, and tendered its full assistance by way of conference or investigation, or survey, toward realization of legislation toward that end, at the same time praying the "safeguarding of the full rights of all citizens or residents of our community."

Another resolution expressed gratitude to Representative Clarence Cannon and other members of the subcommittee of the House committee on the District of Columbia, and to J. Clawson Roop, director of the budget, "for their sympathetic and helpful consideration in the matter of appropriation for projects for buildings and grounds for divisions 10-13 of public schools."

Bicentennial Program Given by Eastern Star

Members of St. John's Lodge were entertained last night at the Masonic Temple with a colorful Bicentennial program given by Areme Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star.

The program was given under the direction of Miss Selma Kline, past matron of Areme Chapter. It included dancing, music and a play, all given in colonial costume.

WINDSHIELD FALLS TO SNIPER'S BULLET

Autoist in Mount Pleasant Section States Gunman Was Poorly Dressed.

A pistol shot, resounding through the vicinity of Mount Pleasant and Kenyon street northwest, last night startled residents and a flurry of excitement spread throughout the neighborhood, increasing fears that the "sniper," long silent, had again renewed activities, when Thomas R Dobson, of 1900 Lamont street northwest, exhibited to police a shattered glass in the door of his automobile.

Dobson said he was driving along Mount Pleasant street and as he neared the intersection of Kenyon street he noticed a shabbily dressed man standing on the corner. As he started to cross the intersection, Dobson declared, the man suddenly stepped from the curb and fired a revolver point-blank at his machine. As the gun flashed, he informed police, the window opposite the driver's seat shattered, part of it falling to the floor of the car.

After firing the shot the man turned and fled, Dobson declared. He was able to catch only a glimpse of the gunman, but told police he was poorly dressed and was either bareheaded or wore a small cap. He said only a few persons were on the street and his assailant's escape was not blocked.

Dobson, who said he was an interior decorator, could assign no reason for the attack, which occurred only a short distance from where Paul Riedel, proprietor of a bakery shop, was fatally wounded some weeks ago by a gunman, who also, without warning, fired on him.

Released Canadian Returns to Bride

Cole, a lather by trade, has been held on an immigration technicality. The marriage to Miss Sallie Marie Davis, 26, a waitress, was performed Thursday afternoon in the office of Col. William E. Peak, superintendent of the jail.

The pair had become engaged in Chicago in 1929. It had been agreed that the wedding would take place more than a week ago. Then followed Cole's arrest on the immigration charge.

Rock Creek Park Bandits Take $30

Held up by two bandits who blocked his path with their machine as he drove through Rock Creek Park last night, Barney L. Crawley, of 1416 R street northwest, was forced at pistol point to surrender $30 in cash.

Crawley told police of the Tenth Precinct that he was on his way home and entered the park at Connecticut avenue and Tilden street northwest. After crossing the ford at the foot of Blagden avenue, he said, another car approached from the right along Rock Creek Church road. He slowed down to let it pass, Crawley declared, but instead it drove directly in front of his car and stopped.

Two men, Crawley told police, emerged and walked toward his car. The men rifled Crawley's pockets, obtained $30 and escaped.

$600,000 ESTIMATES FOR RELIEF MAY BE CUT FROM CITY BILL

House Group Seeks Details of Salaries and Expenses of Charities.

ORGANIZATIONS ASKED TO GIVE SPECIFIC DATA

Drastic Action Is Forecast Unless Information Is Given Quickly.

The House District appropriations subcommittee may leave urgent $600,000 relief estimates out of the District supply bill if more detailed "expense" information is not forthcoming from local charitable organizations, it was learned last night.

District relief units were asked for specific statements as to what portion of their funds are used for salaries and other expenses, and what portion for relief, at hearings on the $600,000 supplemental item, sponsored by President Hoover and the Budget Bureau.

It was said last night that only a few of the organizations have complied with the request; that many of those who submitted statements asked that they be kept confidential.

The committee was represented as not disposed to keep any public statements "confidential," and in a mood to grant no relief funds whatsoever unless the data asked is made immediately available.

Dr. Luther Reichelderfer, District Commissioner, and Public Health Officer William Fowler yesterday formally requested additional funds for the overtaxed tuberculosis and social disease clinic at Sixth and I streets northwest, at reopened hearings. Although this item has not yet been reached in marking the bill, members were said to be favorable to inserting increased appropriations for renting new and larger quarters for the clinic.

Driver of Death Car Sentenced to 5 Years

John Thomas Allison, who entered a plea of guilty to a charge of manslaughter, was yesterday sentenced to serve five years in the penitentiary by Justice James M. Proctor.

Allison was the driver of an automobile that struck and killed Charles N. Gordon, at Wisconsin avenue and P street northwest last month. Gordon was caught between Allison's automobile and a street car on which he was changing the overhead trolley, and was crushed to death.

Robber Trio Draws Long Prison Terms

Two Given 12 Years, Other Gets Eight; Admitted Armed Holdups.

Armed bandits will receive no leniency in the District Supreme Court when they are brought there for trial, Justice James M. Proctor indicated yesterday when he gave two men twelve-year sentences, and a third man, involved in the same crimes, an eight-year sentence.

Bernard L. Downey and Henry Fegen were ordered to serve three four-year consecutive sentences, while Eddie Matthews was ordered to serve two four-year consecutive sentences. Downey, Fegen and Matthews pleaded guilty to robbing Margaret Connor of $16.48 on February 20, and the same trio entered pleas of guilty to robbing Dr. William C. Furr, 200 E street northeast, of a small amount of cash and a watch, on February 22.

Downey and Fegan entered additional pleas of guilty to robbing Frank W. Clark, of the Plaza Hotel, of $102.75 and a ring and watch on February 25. Other charges were said to be held in abeyance against the men in the belief that their sentences would be sufficient to make additional charges unnecessary.

Review Editor Opposes Bankruptcy Law Change

Max Isaac, editor of the American Bankruptcy Review, yesterday conferred with Solicitor General Thomas D. Thatcher on the Hastings bill which would change existing bankruptcy laws.

Many lawyers feel, Mr. Isaac said, that modification of bankruptcy statutes at this time might retard the return of business prosperity. It is expected that Mr. Isaac will confer with Representative Sumners, chairman of the House judiciary committee.

Newsboy Is in Hospital After Fall From Wagon

A 10-year-old boy was injured yesterday afternoon when he was thrown from his newspaper express wagon and struck the back of his head on the pavement in front of 1815 Lamont street northwest. He was taken to Garfield Hospital where it was said his skull may have been fractured.

The boy, William Mihn, of 1371 Monroe street northwest, was making the rounds of his newspaper route, and was coasting down the street on his wagon. The wheels apparently struck a stone and the wagon overturned, throwing him to the street. He was picked up by Miss Fern Keye, of 1900 Lamont street, in an unconscious condition, and taken to the hospital in her automobile.

SCOUT TROPHY IS AWARDED

ACTION IS DELAYED ON FIREARMS BILL

Copeland Seeks Opinion of Mulrooney on Proposed Changes in Law.

Approval of the Capper bill for more stringent regulation of firearms traffic in the District was postponed by the Senate District committee yesterday, while Senator Royal S. Copeland sought the opinion of Police Commissioner Mulrooney, of New York.

The bill has been amended in committee to exempt firearms purchasers from fingerprinting required under the original bill, and to strike tear gas bombs from the list of contraband weapons. Senator Copeland said he is inclined to favor the bill, but wants the views of the New York police official on suggested amendments.

Supporting a bill amending local guardianship laws for incompetent veterans, Theodore Cogswell, register of wills, declared the District's lunacy laws "are peculiar and inadequate" at hearings before the committee.

The bill, sponsored by Cogswell, Charles V. Imlay, vice president of the national conference on uniform State laws; Thomas Cameron, assistant corporation counsel, and Watson Miller, chairman of the national rehabilitation committee of the American Legion, would permit the veterans' administrator to certify mental incompetence in veterans seeking compensation, without subjecting them to the humiliation of a jury trial. The committee took no action on the bill.

Bank Told to Hold Mrs. Dewey Estate

Court Directs Continued Custody of Admiral's Widow's Funds.

The National Savings & Trust Co. yesterday was directed by Justice Peyton Gordon in the District Supreme Court to continue to hold the $600,000 personal estate of Mrs. Mildred McLean Dewey, widow of Admiral George Dewey, pending the execution of letters of administration of the estate.

The Court's action was taken when attorneys for the Trust company explained to the court that Mrs. Dewey had instructed the company to turn over to "her personal represenative" the entire personal estate when she died. Judge Gordon held that the two men who have been named collectors of the estate were not personal representatives and directed the company to continue to hold the funds.

Five wills of Mrs. Dewey have been filed in the District Supreme Court. Hearings on them are scheduled to begin April 16.

REDS PLAN PROTEST AT EMBASSY TODAY

Police Prepare for Eventualities When Nippon Envoy's Expulsion Is Demanded.

A mass demonstration by radicals to "demand the expulsion of the Japanese Ambassador from the United States" is planned by friends of the Soviet Union and the Unemployed Councils of the United States for 1 o'clock this afternoon in front of the Japanese Embassy.

A call for the demonstration was made in posters headed, "Stop the Robber War in China!" Subheads ordered a demand for the withdrawal of Japanese and all foreign forces from China, a demand for all war funds for the unemployed, and a halt on shipments of munitions to Japan.

Police officials indicated that sufficient men would be detailed to the vicinity of the embassy, which is at 2514 Massachusetts avenue, at the time of the demonstration to maintain order and prevent law violations.

The circulars issued charge that "Japanese imperialist troops have slaughtered 20,000 civilians in the war in Shanghai. Thousands more were killed on the battlefields of Manchuria and other places where the robber capitalists have set their foot of conquest."

Hitt Gives Gasoline Thief 30-Day Term

Motorists who have been victimized by "gasoline thieves" yesterday were given assurance in Police Court that the culprits who took their fuel will receive severe punishment if they are brought before a judge.

Francis Duncan Tyler, colored, was given 30 days in jail for taking gasoline from the machine of Lawton W. Luther, 1639 West Virginia avenue northeast. Judge Isaac R. Hitt imposed sentence.

Messenger Boy Hurt When Struck by Auto

A messenger boy was admitted to Emergency Hospital in an undetermined condition yesterday morning after he was knocked down by the automobile of Mrs. Robert Hinckley, of 1623 Sixteenth street northwest.

The boy, Fred Glasscock, 16 years old, of 1610 Kearney street northeast, was hit as the machine, operated by Roosevelt Davis, Mrs. Hinckley's chauffeur, made a left turn from Sixteenth street into I street northwest, according to police reports.

Burglar Gets $250 Clothing.

CAR MERGER REPORT HANGS ON WAGE-CUT VIEWS OF EMPLOYES

Black Requests Information on Reaction of Men to Pay Reductions.

NEW CONTRACT IS HELD SATISFACTORY TO UNION

Traction Bill to Be Brought Out at Once if Workers Reply Favorably.

Representative Loring M. Black, Jr., chairman of the House District utilities subcommittee, yesterday requested a written statement from the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes local, that new wage contracts signed with the Capital Traction Co. are satisfactory to the men.

With this information in hand, Representative Black said he would not delay a favorable report on the proposed traction consolidation, scheduled for consideration before the full House District committee Thursday night.

He said a representative of the union told him yesterday that the new contract, signed at 2 cents less an hour, is satisfactory to the men. If this is true, Mr. Black said he sees no reason why he should hold up the merger report. He added that traction officials informed him the merger might mean employment of more workers.

Representative Black said he plans to report the bill without amendments, leaving it optional with the full committee whether or not it cares to exclude the company from operation of taxicabs.

Contractor Wins $781 Suit From Government

Settlement of a suit filed by Joe High, plumbing contractor, relative to the furnishing of fixtures for Garfield School in 1928, was ordered yesterday by the District Commissioners. The District heads concurred in the recommendation of the corporation counsel that the plaintiff be paid $781.33.

Mr. High sued the District government for $1,162.67 on September 27, 1929, because $400 had been withheld on the Garfield project because he had failed to complete the job on scheduled time. A later check showed that the installation was 99 per cent complete and that the delay caused the District no inconvenience.

Man Enters Guilty Plea In Rum-Picture Cases

Clark H. Packard, 29 years old, yesterday in Police Court pleaded guilty to a charge of possession of a small amount of liquor and an obscene picture.

Police entered Packard's apartment at 2164 Florida avenue northwest Thursday night and arrested him. Sentence in both cases was continued until April 9, and Packard was released on a $1,000 bond.

Housekeeping on Himalaya Expedition Dared by Wife

Housekeeping for mountain climbers in the heights of the Himalayas is not a task to be recommended to other women, Frau Hetty Dyhrenfurth told members of the National Geographic Society last night in an address at the Washington Auditorium. Living at a base camp for more than a week at an altitude of 19,000 feet, she found it extremely difficult to breathe in a storm, she said, and sat up through one night to keep from suffocating.

Frau Dyhrenfurth remained alone in charge of supplies at this camp while waiting for fresh porters, and then led them over Jonsong Pass, 20,270 feet high, to get the supplies to her husband and his mountaineer companions.

In the meantime the climbers had ascended Jonsong Peak, 24,340 feet high, attaining, at the time, a world record. Frau Dyhrenfurth's climb gives her the record for the greatest mountain height attained by a living woman. The climbs were made in 1930.

Before ascending Jonsong, the speaker's husband, Gunther Dyhrenfurth, and his companions, made an attempt to scale Mount Kinchinjunga, third highest mountain in the world. They were driven from the icy slopes by an avalanche which killed one of the porters and endangered the lives of all the other members of the party.

Other pictures showed the contrast between the icy heights and the steaming valleys of Sikkim through which the expedition, with its 400 porters, made its way from Darjeeling to its high base camp.

Unemployment Protester Faces 27th Day of Fast

Facing the twenty-seventh day of his unemployment protest fast, Dr. Frederick F. Wolter, 57-year-old German-born savant, told a Post reporter last night that he is determined to abstain from food until suitable employment is proffered or death overtakes him.

Wan and worn, the bespectacled little scholar said that provision of a $600 or better a year pension would, however, end his self-enforced fast. A tiny cottage in a small plot of ground, where he could be surrounded by his books, is the haven he seeks to spend the balance of his days.

Dr. Wolter's funds are fast disappearing. Only enough money remains to pay for a week's lodging at the Salvation Army hotel where he is staying.

Medical men have estimated that a man can live without food until his weight drops to 40 per cent of normal. Dr. Wolter's poundage has diminished about 20 per cent.
